William Ashdown,1988 During the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries the railway and shipping interests of the Great Lakes basin were regularly at odds with one another Accusations of rate cutting and unfair trade practices were constantly being hurled back and forth and at times they seemed to have little in common but this was not always the case Through joint traffic agreements railway and shipping lines found that they could aid and complement one another each furthering the others trade This book examines how Ontario s railways faced the steamship question and in particular why they saw a need to acquire their own vessels By tracing almost 200 individual ships and dozens of corporate entities the history of these waterborne railway enterprises is revealed Not overlooked are the railway harbours and the facilities that made the crucial link between train and ship

Brown, 2008-04-21 Despite the green benefits of rail travel Canada has lost much of its railway heritage Across the country stations have been bulldozed and rails ripped up Once the heart of communities large and small stations and tracks have left little more than a gaping hole in Canada's landscapes This book revisits the times when railways were the country's economic lifeline and the station the social centre Here was where we worked played listened to political speeches or simply said goodbye to loved ones never knowing when they would return The landscapes which grew around the station are also explored and include such forgotten features as station hotels restaurants gardens and the once common railway YMCA Railway companies often hired the world's leading architects to design grand station buildings which ranged in style from chateau esque to art deco Even small town stations and wayside shelters displayed an artistic flare and elegance Although most have vanished the book celebrates the survival of that heritage in stations which have been saved or indeed remain in use The book will appeal to anyone who has links with our rail era or who simply appreciates the value of Canada's built heritage
