The Social Control of Technology in North Africa Andrea Kavanaugh, 1998 Examines the social control of new media and the implications of access to new media in a tightly controlled environment The Internet in the Mideast and North Africa Eric Goldstein, 1999 VI Cybercensorship its various forms Liberation and Technology Sheikheldin, Gussai H., 2018-02-27 The most fundamental difference between developing and developed societies is technology in a broad yet specific sense so states the author of this important study Liberation and Technology Development possibilities in pursuing technological autonomy The ways in which technology is developed institutionalized animated and celebrated form the core of development human economic environmental etc and ultimately civilization itself But techno spheres are not only technical They are also social political and ideological For societies and countries that have long been kept from realizing their own prosperity and dignity development is also liberation The main treatise of this book is that each developing society ought to seek to achieve technological autonomy in its quest for positive transformations and prosperity for its people Technological autonomy is about attaining a high level of self determination in planning and managing technological affairs Attaining endogenous capacity to guide and execute decisions on production and innovation creating and transferring key technological products and services steering relevant foreign and local investment as well as trade setting own priorities of development free from external manipulation are goals that must be central to such planning efforts With evidence and argument and in plain language this book suggests a novel way of thinking about development through envisioning and building better techno social systems For these reasons this book is a welcome addition to the body of ideas informing practitioners and theorists in the field of development political leaders economists sociologists engineers technologists scientists scholars planners and activists who are involved in relevant development processes and liberation struggles

Frontiers of Broadband, Electronic and Mobile Commerce Russel Cooper, Gary Madden, 2012-12-06 Russel Cooper and Gary Madden The present volume analyses the frontiers of broadband electronic and mobile commerce markets High capacity and intelligent mobile telecommunication net works have resulted in new services such as SMS and Internet banking Growth in mobile Internet network infrastructure and subscription has provided a base for the development of e commerce Accordingly recent research on broadband net works is forward looking e g forecasting Internet telephony adoption and the structure of future retail markets The broadband regime brings with it concerns of identifying appropriate standards and delivery for universal service Regulation and pricing are matters of importance as well as appropriate investment decisions within a market of ongoing innovation The volume is divided in five parts e commerce business models network technology and productivity demand and pricing market growth regulation and investment and issues related to the development imperative The structure of the volume is guided by the basic themes considered at the International Telecommunications Society's Asia Australasian Regional Conference Mcbusiness E commerce and the Impact of Broadband on regional Development and Business Prospects which took place in Perth Western Australia on 22-24 June 2003. The volume contains a selection of papers presented at this conference as well as four additional invited papers commissioned to augment the volume. The invited papers are authored by Jerry Hausman (Chapter 1), Jeffery Bernstein and Charles Zarkadas (Chapter 6), M. Ishaq Nadiri and Banani Nandi (Chapter 8), and Glenn Woroch (Chapter 13).

The ^ADigital Flood Dr. James W. Cortada, 2013-02-01. In this book, historian James W. Cortada provides the first world-wide history of how computers appeared and spread to over twenty nations in less than six decades. It explores economic, political, social, and technological reasons and consequences. It is based on extensive research into primary and secondary sources and concludes with a discussion of implications for key players in the globalized economy.

E-Learning in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) Region Alan S. Weber, Sihem Hamlaoui, 2018-02-27. In the last decade, due to factors of ICT infrastructural and broadband maturation, rising levels of educational attainment, and computer literacy, and diversification strategies, e-learning has exploded in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region. However, significant barriers remain in the region: e-learning development, lack of research on outcomes and effectiveness, paucity of Arabic language learning objects, monopolies, and high cost of telecommunications, cultural taboos, accreditation, censorship, and teacher training. This unique volume is the first comprehensive effort to describe the history, development, and current state of e-learning in each of the 20 MENA countries, from Algeria to Yemen. Each entry is expertly written by a specialist who is acutely familiar with the state of e-learning in their respective country and concludes with a bibliography of key reports, peer-reviewed books, and articles, and web resources. E-Learning in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) proves itself as a vital compendium for a wide readership that includes academics, students, transnational program directors, international education experts, MENA government departments, commercial vendors, and investors, and ICT development and regulatory agencies involved in e-learning in the Middle East.

State Power 2.0 Muzammil M. Hussain, 2016-04-01. Digital media and online social networking applications have changed the way in which dissent is organized, with social movement leaders using online applications and digital content systems to organize collective action, activate local protest groups, network with international social movements, and share their political perspectives. In the past, authoritarian regimes could control broadcast media in times of political crisis by destroying newsprint supplies, seizing radio and television stations, and blocking phone calls. It is much more difficult to control media in the digital age, though there have certainly been occasions when states have successfully shut down their digital networks. What causes state powers to block internet access, disable digital networks, or even shut off internet access? How is it done? What is the impact, and how do dissidents attempt to fight back? In this timely and accessible volume, a collection of high-profile international scholars answer these key questions using cases from Israel, Iran, Russia, Morocco, Vietnam, and Kuwait, and assess the political economy of the actors, institutions, and regimes involved and effected by the state management and control of digital networks.

Arabizing the Internet Jon W. Anderson, 1998-06-09.

The Internet is a complex of technologies and applications not all of which are interrelated or develop at the same stage. Widely viewed as the first wave of an Age of Information it is constantly being reshaped by new users. Advocates of the Internet see a structure of decentralized communication as the model of a new universal culture and social organization of information that will sweep cultural differences. Such reflections on the cultural future of the Internet are as much a part of the phenomenon as its technological and organizational features. The Internet is not one thing but several: a physical infrastructure, the software and protocols that make it work, the tasks and values that the software and protocols implement, a social organization of regulation and communities of use, and a cultural context that includes reflection upon communication information and knowledge. As the Internet spreads, alternative local and regional models emerge. Overseas Arabs brought Arab culture and politics to the Internet while it was developing in academic and research settings. But it is commerce and telecommunications developments that now bring the Internet to Arab countries. The Arabization of the Internet draws on the competing priorities and visions of relations between local orders and global processes.

Handbook of New Media Leah A. Lievrouw, Sonia M. Livingstone, 2006-01-17 Thoroughly revised and updated, this Student Edition of the successful Handbook of New Media has been abridged to showcase the best of the hardback edition. This Handbook sets out boundaries of new media research and scholarship and provides a definitive statement of the current state of the art of the field. Covering major problem areas of research, the Handbook of New Media includes an introductory essay by the editors and a concluding essay by Ron Rice. Each chapter, written by an internationally renowned scholar, provides a review of the most significant social research findings and insights.

Internet Research Annual Mia Consalvo, Nancy Baym, Jeremy Hunsinger, Klaus Bruhn Jensen, 2004 Internet Research Annual offers a selection of the best work presented at the first three conferences of the Association of Internet Researchers and provides a useful overview of the cutting edge in Internet studies. Established scholars and new researchers address issues such as communities on off line, the Internet as a methodological tool and space for research, and the places, politics, and policies of the Internet, creating a volume that comprehensively covers the field of Internet research. Also included are a brief history of the organization, a list of previously published papers from the conferences, and works by several of the keynote speakers, including Phil Agre, Barbara Warnick, Bill Dutton, Sheizaf Rafaeli, Susan Herring, Robin Mansell, and much more.
