Social Protection in Developing Countries Katja Bender, Markus Kaltenborn, Christian Pfleiderer, 2013-09-02. Providing universal access to social protection and health systems for all members of society, including the poor and vulnerable, is increasingly considered crucial to international development debates. This is the first book to explore from an interdisciplinary and global perspective the reforms of social protection systems introduced in recent years by many governments of low and middle income countries. Although a growing body of literature has been concerned with the design and impact of social protection, less attention has been directed towards analyzing and explaining these reform processes themselves. Through case studies of African, Asian and Latin American countries, this book examines the global phenomenon of recent social protection reforms in low and middle income areas and how it differs across countries both in terms of scope and speed of institutional change. Exploring the major domestic and international factors affecting the political feasibility of social protection reform, the book outlines the successes and failures of recent reform initiatives. This invaluable book combines contributions from both academics and practitioner experts to give students, researchers and practitioners in the fields of social security, economics, law and political science an in-depth understanding of political reform processes in developing countries. This book presents the results of a collective and original empirical investigation of the institutional systems underlying the capitalisms that are coming to the fore in developing nations. While varieties of industrialized countries' capitalisms are extensively scrutinized, those of developing countries' capitalisms are far less documented. By implementing a unified and original comparative approach based on the institutional complementarity theory the different contributors of the book find evidence for the originality and heterogeneity of the forms of capitalism to be observed in developing countries This text analyses capitalist systems as clusters of sectoral institutions and regulations identifying differences between these clusters in a large sample of emerging and developing countries Rougier and Combarnous bring together contributions answering the following questions What are these clusters of institutions underlying emerging capitalisms Are there common or specific patterns of institutional clustering across countries and what are the main characteristics of the varieties of capitalism they shape What are their main long term determinants Are there specific patterns of economic outcome associated with these clusters Can different forms of institutional complementarity be observed How can we analyse institutional reform from this perspective Social Security in Developing Countries André Leliveld,1992 Public Sector Economics for Developing Countries Michael Howard,2001 A discussion of the impact of government revenues and expenditures on economic activity with special reference to developing countries Michael Howard raises theoretical and empirical issues relating to the role of the public sector in economic development Social Security Between Past and Future Franz von Benda-Beckmann,Keebet von Benda-Beckmann,2007 Social security is a particularly precarious issue where states hardly provide any services in periods of need and distress This book analyses the arrangements relationships through which food shelter and care are provided on the island of Ambon famous spice island in Eastern Indonesia It also shows how relations of support tie Ambonese migrants in the Netherlands to their home villages and how normative conceptions of need and care among kinsmen and villagers change over time Though special in their own historical setting Ambonese networks of care and support are illustrative of poor rural populations in the Third World Focusing on the precursors of the violent conflict that erupted in 1998 the book shows that social security is like a magnifying glass linking past present and future Social Security Bulletin ,2010
