Trust, Property and Social Change in a Southern Slovakian Village Davide Torsello, 2003 Slovakia is a young and little studied country of the former socialist bloc As in all post socialist Eurasia continuing transformations of everyday practices are still inadequately understood This study combines anthropological and historical methods to search for alternative ways of reading post socialism in the rural community More specifically it applies the notions of trust and property to map the outcomes of over a hundred years of turbulent social change but not in the way that mainstream economists and political scientists have used these concepts Trust and property acquire analytic significance only when contextualised into the practices and ideologies of the actors This allows the observer to grasp the nuances of apparently ambivalent behaviour and uttered mistrust in other villagers and local institutions Ambiguity veils subtle strategies for keeping up with the instability of the times and obtaining the best one can from the present By providing a theoretically grounded ethnographical account of historical transformation the book makes an original anthropological contribution to the classic theme of social change in rural societies while at the same time engaging constructively with other social science approaches to postsocialism

Seligmann, 2002-03-01 This innovative volume studies women as economic political and cultural mediators of space gender value and language in informal markets Drawing on diverse methodologies multisited fieldwork linguistic analysis and archival research the contributors demonstrate how women move between and knit together household and marketplace activities This knitting together pivots on how household practices and economies are translated and transferred to the market as well as how market practices and economic principles become integral to the nature and construction of the household Exploring the cultural identities and economic practices of women traders in ten diverse locales Bolivia Ghana Hungary India Indonesia Mexico Morocco Nicaragua Peru and the Philippines the authors pay special attention to the effects of global forces national economic policies and nongovernmental organizations on women's participation in the market and the domestic sector The authors also consider the impact that women's economic and political activities in social movements public protests and more hidden kinds of subversive behavior have on state policy on the attitudes of different sectors of society toward female traders and on the dynamics of the market itself A final theme focuses on the cultural dimension of mediation Many women traders straddle cultural spheres and move back and forth between them Does this affect their participation in the market and their identities How do ties of ethnicity or acts of reciprocity affect the nature of commodity exchanges Do they create exchanges that are neither purely commodified nor wholly without calculation Or is it more often the case that ethnic commonalities and reciprocity merely mask the commodification of social and economic exchanges Does this straddling lead to the emergence of new kinds of hybrid identities and practices In considering these questions the authors specify the ways in which consumers contribute to identity formation among market women
