An Archaeology of Images Miranda Aldhouse Green,2004-08-02 Using archaeology and social anthropology and more than 100 original line drawings and photographs An Archaeology of Images takes a fresh look at how ancient images of both people and animals were used in the Iron Age and Roman societies of Europe 600 BC to AD 400 and investigates the various meanings with which images may have been imbued The book challenges the usual interpretation of statues reliefs and figurines as passive things to be looked at or worshipped and reveals them instead as active artefacts designed to be used handled and broken It is made clear that the placing of images in temples or graves may not have been the only episode in their biographies and a single image may have gone through several existences before its working life was over Miranda Aldhouse Green examines a wide range of other issues from gender and identity to foreignness enmity and captivity as well as the significance of the materials used to make the images The result is a comprehensive survey of the multifarious functions and experiences of images in the communities that produced and consumed them Challenging many previously held assumptions about the meaning and significance of Celtic and Roman art An Archaeology of Images will be controversial yet essential reading for anyone interested in this area Symbolist Landscapes James Kearns,1989

Materials and Meaning in Architecture Nathaniel Coleman,2020-02-20 Interweaving architecture philosophy and cultural history Materials and Meaning in Architecture develops a rich and multi dimensional exploration of materials and materiality in an age when architectural practice seems otherwise preoccupied with image and visual representation Arguing that architecture is primarily experienced by the whole body rather than chiefly with the eyes this broad ranging study shows how the most engaging built works are as tactile as they are sensuous communicating directly with the bodily senses especially touch It explores the theme of material imagination and the power of establishing place identity in an architect s work to consider the enduring expressive possibilities of material use in architecture The book s chapters can be dipped into each individual chapter providing close readings of built works by selected modern masters Scarpa Zumthor Williams and Tsien insights into key texts and theories Ruskin Loos Bachelard or short cultural histories of materials wood brick concrete steel and glass And yet taken together the chapters build to a powerful book length argument about how meaning accrues to materials through time and about the need to reinsert the bodily experience of materiality into architectural design It is thus also in part a manifesto arguing for architecture to act as a bulwark against the tide of an increasingly depersonalised built environment With insights for a wide range of readers ranging from students through to researchers and professional designers Materials and Meaning in Architecture will cause theorists to rethink their assumptions and designers to see new potential for their projects

Tolstoy's 'What is Art?' Terry Diffey, 2014-08-27 With its demand that works of art be judged according to their morally didactic content Tolstoy's reviled aesthetics has seemed to exclude from the canon far too many works widely accepted as masterpieces including Shakespeare and Beethoven This book first published in 1985 argues that these are not mere oversights on the part of Tolstoy he knew full well the consequences of his line of reasoning The author contends that even if we disagree with and eventually reject much of what Tolstoy concludes his account of the nature and purpose of art is nevertheless worth consideration Diffey's argument by no means accepts all of What is Art but by suggesting that the work is best interpreted as a counterpoint to the amoral aestheticism prevalent in Russia at the time he does much to restore it to a status deserving attention particularly in today's climate of extreme relativism
