Abstract

South Africa is the most economically unequal country in the world. Moreover, research shows that inequality has only risen since advent of multi-party democracy in 1994. In this article, I review research that documents how economic inequality has formed over the past century, and the relationship between these structural conditions and contemporary social stratification. The literature shows that since the end of apartheid racial inequality has declined somewhat, but increases in inequality within race have more than offset this. Despite momentous political change and formal legal equality, economic equality remains elusive for most South Africans. Research on South Africa shows that accounting for the historical construction of institutions that shape inequality is crucial not only for understanding stratification within the country, but for explaining it in any contemporary industrial society.

The advent of formal democracy in 1994 held for many the

Haunss,2019-11-22 This volume addresses the contested relationship between social stratification and social movements in three different ways First the authors address the relationship between social stratification and the emergence of protest mobilization Second the texts look at social stratification and social positions to explain variations in political orientations as well as differing aims and interests of protestors Finally the volume focuses on the socio structural composition of protestors Social Stratification and Social Movements takes up recent attempts to reconnect research on these two fields Instead of calling for a return of a class perspective or abandoning the classical social movement research agenda it introduces a multi dimensional perspective on stratification and social movements and broadens the view by extending the empirical analysis beyond Europe      Class Formations and Inequality Structures in Contemporary African Migration John A.

Arthur, 2014-10-15 This book examines the influences of social class and inequality structures on migration in Africa using information from Ghana As the country achieves moderate to significant economic gains driven in part by the country's diaspora communities the desire to migrate has intensified Migration is now synonymous with social mobility and self improvement It has been found that existing class and status inequalities are analytically inseparable from the social and cultural processes underpinning the motivations behind Ghanaian migration Migrant class and socioeconomic attributes are closely intertwined reinforcing and operating at every level of the migration decision making to influence the motivation to migrate the type and form of migration the direction of the migration its timing and ultimately the outcomes and expectations that migrants associate with their decision to migrate From a historical and contemporary perspective this book argues that power and class based structural relationships are significant components in understanding how migratory diasporas shape and are shaped in turn by social class and inequality The social class identities that Ghanaian immigrants manifest in the United States are often based on immigrant formulations and importation of class dynamics from the home country These identities are then transformed in the countries of destination and replayed or relived back home thereby creating multiple class identities that are powerful forces in inducing social changes In essence migrant social class attributes formed before and post migration is significant because it holds the possibilities of transforming the social structures of migrant sending countries As migrants return home and seek reintegration into the body polity of the home society conflicts emanating from changes in their class dynamics may hinder or promote sociocultural and economic development Hence the imperative of the central government is to understand and incorporate into national development planning the social class characteristics of its citizens who are leaving as well as those who are returning      Social Class and Education Lois Weis, Nadine Dolby, 2012

Social Class and Education Global Perspectives is the first empirically grounded volume to explore the intersections of class social structure opportunity and education on a truly global scale Fifteen essays from contributors representing the US Europe China Latin America and other regions offer an unparalleled examination of how social class differences are made and experienced through schooling By underscoring the consequences of our new global reality this volume takes seriously the transnational migration of commerce capital and peoples and the ramifications of such for education and social structure Moving beyond national confines internationally recognized scholars Lois Weis and Nadine Dolby offer a set of emblematic essays that break new theoretical and empirical ground on the ways class is produced and maintained through education around the world
