Social Studies for the 21st Century Roberta A. McKay, Susan Elaine Gibson, 2004 The purpose of this book in bringing together these diverse areas in relation to social studies is to contribute to a renewed dialogue and excitement about social studies and its essential contribution to global citizenship for the 21st Century Preface by George H Richardson In the last decade there has been an explosion of research and writing in social studies education In response to such diverse forces as globalization accelerating ethno cultural pluralism a renewed interest in citizenship and the increased use of new media in classrooms academics have produced a wealth of scholarship related to these developments Unfortunately during this same period of rapid growth there have been few attempts to review recent advances in the field The relative scarcity of good and current bibliographic work in social studies has created an urgent need for a considered and scholarly review of the available literature For this reason alone Social Studies for the 21st Century A Review of Current Literature and Research is a welcome addition to social studies scholarship field do much more than create a strong reading list that will be of benefit to social studies scholars and practitioners alike Their text is a reconceptualist study that seams together discussions of content pedagogy and philosophy in such a way that they immerse the reader in the lived world of social studies education As such the text is far more than an annotated bibliography it is a form of field narrative that is a rich contribution to the discipline The authors are certainly aware of the roots of social studies research and references to seminal works by scholars as diverse as Ken Osborne Cleo Cherryholmes Walter Parker Kieran Egan and Jerome Bruner only help to establish a sense of continuity with the work of such contemporary specialists as Linda Levstik Alan Sears Peter Seixas Carole Hahn David Selby and John Cogan Of particular note in the text are the strong and badly needed sections on gender equity constructivism brain research and new media scholarship and by situating all four within the context of current developments in social studies the authors add significantly to our understanding of their impact on social studies teaching and learning As well the short though well researched section on global education is a welcome addition because it extends the range of the field to include works that examine the impact of globalization on global education In summary Social Studies for the 21st Century A Review of Current

Literature and Research is a welcome and badly needed contribution to social studies scholarship that will serve quite well either as a reference work or as a fine introduction to the field of social studies itself And because the authors have written the text in a clear accessible style it is a work that will find an enthusiastic reception among academics pre service teachers and classroom teachers alike George H Rihardson PhD Associate Professor Department of secondary Education University of Alberta

Social Studies Education in South and South East Asian Contexts Kerry J Kennedy, 2021-07-22 The education of young people is context bound This edited volume explores the contexts that characterise South and South East Asia and their influence on social studies education There is not a single context across this broad geographical expanse rather different religions different political systems and different values exert influences that create distinctive programmes that characterise different countries Yet there are also commonalities such as the post colonial nature of most of the countries portrayed in this book determined efforts at establishing new national communities and multiple value systems that lead to distinctive local priorities There are also voices of resistance in these chapters recognising the realities of local contexts but also recognising the need for change Social studies education in these contexts may well be descended from its origins in North America but in South and South Asian contexts it has taken on new purposes new forms and new values Education researchers policymakers and postgraduate students in comparative education will find the volume useful in its exploration and comparison of the social studies curricular and reforms that shaped them
