Social Trust And The Management Of Risk:

Social Trust and the Management of Risk George Cvetkovich, 2013-12-16 Social trust is a crucial issue to many aspects of modern society Policy makers continually aspire to winning it and corporations frequently run the risk of losing it The trust deficit raises vital questions and problems to which until recently there have been few answers or solutions Experts from both sides of the Atlantic explore the importance for trust of various influences from individual perceptions to organizational systems and consider the conditions involved in building or undermining trust Several authors examine practical hazard management issues including medical vaccination programmes and popular participation in pollution control and waste management as strategies for enhancing social trust This book provides insightful analysis for researchers and students of environmental and social sciences and is essential reading for those engaged in risk management in both the public and private sectors

Social Trust and the Management of Threatened and Endangered Species George Cvetkovich, 2002 Social trust the willingness to rely on those with formal responsibility to develop policies and make decisions facilitates effective management of environmental issues including wildlife management National polls suggest that the public trusts government agencies to solve environmental problems yet such trust is low or non existent in areas of controversy such as the protection of threatened and endangered species This study explored the role of social trust in understanding views of threatened and endangered species management in the National Forests of southern California The 127 participants surveyed lived in or near a National Forest or were recreational and or other users of the National Forest The results suggest that trust in Forest Service management of wildlife relates to perceived similarity between individual values regarding species protection and Forest Service values Participants who believe the Forest Service shares their values have a high trust those who believe the Forest Service does not share their values have a low trust The most trusting tend to believe that species protection should be the primary principle guiding forest management and that the Forest Service consistently operates according to these principles Those low in trust believe forest management should be based on the fulfillment of human needs they perceive that the Forest Service operates inconsistently according to their values The study suggests that social trust is a significant predictor of approval of species management practices

Social Trust and Life Insurance Louise Morris, 2011-05-25 This book investigates the role of incomplete knowledge social trust and risk perceptions in influencing acceptance of the perceived risks related to insurers using genetic test results In addition the author identifies and explains the factors and conditions that affect this risk acceptance pattern In order to do so both survey methods and semi structured interviews are employed A review of the necessity of life insurance companies to acquire genetic test results is undertaken followed by an analysis of the speculated consequences of such usage for society Management of the risks related to insurers using genetic test results is examined and the problems and difficulties inherent in the risk management strategies suggested and enforced are explored This is followed by a comparison between the societal risks produced by insurers using genetic test results and the risks theorised as pertaining to a risk society Beck 1992 and a runaway world Giddens 1990 1999
