Women, Oppression and Social Work Lesley Day, Mary Langan, 2002-09-11 Many of the gains of the women's movement over the past 20 years now seem threatened by the combined effects of prolonged economic insecurity reductions in the scope of welfare provision and a general shift in the climate of public opinion to the right Social workers are faced with the growing demands of a more impoverished and more unstable society with less resources to meet these demands In response to these pressures feminist social work has begun to move beyond some of the limitations of both the traditional and radical social work models of the past The emerging anti discriminatory model recognizes the diversity of oppressions

according to race gender and class as well as those of age disability and sexual orientation Women Oppression and Social Work offers a new perspective on feminist social work which takes account of the complexity of the manifold oppressions that affect the lives of most women and most social work clients

Social Work, the Media and Public Relations (Routledge Revivals) Bob Franklin,Nigel Parton,2014-06-17 Over the past few decades relationships between social workers and the media have become increasingly challenging Social workers feel aggrieved by media reporting of their profession and believe that journalists lack sufficient knowledge and experience of the social services to report matters adequately and sensitively whilst some journalists have urged social workers to adopt a more proactive public relations strategy This book first published in 1991 analyses the causes and consequences of the negative portrayal of social work within the media and considers various ways in which this image might be improved The authors consider a variety of developments during the 1990s designed to redress imbalances in media reporting and present a more accurate picture of social workers and the people with whom they work This title remains very relevant in light of the high profile cases related to the social service that continue to feature in the British press and will be of particular value to students and researchers with an interest in the relationship between the media and social policy the 1940s 70s to the more behavioural punitive and managerial methods of childrearing today made popular by experts such as Gina Ford and Supernanny Jo Frost and by New Labour's parent education programmes This trend Hendrick argues is symptomatic of the sour mean spirited and vindictive social norms found throughout society today It undermines the better instincts of parents and therefore damages parent child relations Instead he proposes parents should focus on understanding and helping their children as they work at growing up
