Excerpt from The Life and Love of the Insect Notwithstanding their filthy trade the Dung beetles occupy a very respectable rank Thanks to their usually imposing size to their severe and irreproachably glossy garb to their short stout thickset Shape to the quaint ornamentation either of their brow or also of their thorax they cut an excellent figure in the collector s boxes especially when to our own species oftenest of an ebon black we add a few tropical species ashing with gleams of gold and ruddy copper About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Fabre,2019-11-19 Jean Henri Fabre s The Life of the Spider is a seminal work in entomology that intricately explores the behavior anatomy and ecological significance of spiders Written with Fabre s characteristic observational style the book marries meticulous scientific inquiry with vivid descriptions captivating anecdotes and a lyrical prose that transcends mere taxonomy Fabre s narrative not only illuminates the marvels of the arachnid world but also situates them within the broader tapestry of nature reflecting the burgeoning interest in natural history during the late 19th century His approach exemplifies a shift towards empirical observation charmingly illustrating the intricate lives of spiders while inviting readers into their fascinating subterranean communities Jean Henri Fabre a French naturalist and entomologist dedicated his life to the study of invertebrates particularly insects and spiders His background as a schoolteacher fostered a keen sense of observation leading him to meticulously document his findings through comprehensive studies Fabre s encounters with the natural world were not just scientific endeavors they were also infused with a deep sense of wonder expressing his belief that observation is the foundation of understanding For anyone intrigued by the complexities of nature or seeking to deepen their appreciation of the arachnid kingdom The Life of the Spider serves as an indispensable resource Fabre s engaging narrative not only educates but also inspires awe making it a must read for naturalists students and casual readers alike Ants and Some Other Insects: An Inquiry Into the Psychic Powers of These Animals Auguste Forel,2019-12-06 In Ants and Some Other Insects An Inquiry Into the Psychic Powers of These Animals Auguste Forel embarks on a pioneering exploration of the behavioral patterns and cognitive abilities of ants and various other insects Through meticulous observation and scientific inquiry Forel employs a methodical approach to unravel the complexities of insect society delving into their communication instinctual behaviors and potential psychic phenomena His engaging narrative blends empirical research with a touch of philosophical reflection situating the work within the burgeoning field of comparative psychology at the turn of the 20th century when the fascination with animal consciousness was gaining momentum Auguste Forel a Swiss psychiatrist and myrmecologist was deeply invested in the intersections of biology psychology and sociology His groundbreaking studies on ant behavior stemmed from a profound curiosity about the collective intelligence and social structures of these creatures influenced by contemporaneous debates regarding animal cognition and consciousness Forel s dual expertise in psychiatry and entomology enabled him to approach the subject with a unique lens bridging scientific inquiry with more existential apprehensions about the mind This book is highly recommended for readers interested in entomology psychology and the intricate relationships within the animal kingdom Forel s compelling insights challenge preconceived notions about insect intelligence and invite readers to reconsider the boundaries of consciousness in the animal world making it an essential read for both scholars and enthusiasts alike

The Life of Jean Henri Fabre: The Entomologist, 1823-1910 Augustin Fabre, 2006-01-01 In a few days time naturalists poets and philosophers will repair in company to S rignan in the neighbourhood of Orange What is calling them from every point of the intellectual horizon from the most distant cities and capitals to a little Proven al village Moussu Fabr they would tell you yonder in a tone of respectful sympathy But who is the Moussu Fabr thus cherished by the simplest as well as by the most cultivated minds He is a sturdy old man of all but ninety years who has spent almost the whole of his life in the company of Wasps Bees Gnats Beetles Spiders and Ants and has described the doings of these tiny creatures in a most wonderful fashion in ten large volumes entitled Souvenirs Entomologiques or Etudes sur l Instinct et les M urs des Insectes One might say of this achievement what the author of Lettres Persanes said of his book Proles sine matre It is a child without a mother It is in short unprecedented It has not its fellow either in the Machal of Solomon or the apologues of the old fabulists or the treatises on natural history written by our modern scientists The fabulists look to find man in the animal which for them is little more than a pretext for comparisons and moral narratives and the scientists commonly confine their curiosity to the dissection of the insect s organs the analysis of its functions and the classification of species We might even say that the insect is the least of their cares for like Solomon they delight in holding forth upon all the creatures upon the earth or in the heavens above and all the plants from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall 1 Kings iv 32 33 Fabre on the contrary has eyes only for the insect He observes it by and for itself in the most trivial manifestations of its life the living active insect with its labours and its habits is the thing that interests him before all else guiding his investigation of the infinite host of these tiny lives which claim his attention on every hand and in this world of insects wealth of artifice and capacities of the mental order seem to be in an inverse ratio to beauty of form and brilliance of colour For this reason Fabre learns to disdain the magnificent Butterfly applying himself by preference to the modest Fly the two winged Flies which are relatives of our common House fly or the four winged Flies the numerous and infinitely various cousins of the Wasps and Bees the Spiders ugly indeed but such skilful spinners and even the Dung beetles and Scarab id of every species those wonderful agents of terrestrial purification In this singular world which affords him the society which he prefers he has gathered an ample harvest of unexpected facts and highly perplexing actions on the part of these little so called inferior animals No one has excelled him in detecting their slightest movements and in surprising all the secrets of their lives Darwin declared and many others have repeated his words that Fabre was an incomparable observer The verdict is all the more significant in that the French entomologist did not scruple to oppose his observations to the theories of the famous English naturalist
