The Light of the Western Stars Zane Grey, 2021-05-26 Madeline Hammond stood tapping a shapely foot on the floor and with some amusement contrasted her reception in El Cajon with what it was when she left a train at the Grand Central The only time she could remember ever having been alone like this was once when she had missed her maid and her train at a place outside of Versailles an adventure that had been a novel and delightful break in the prescribed routine of her much chaperoned life She crossed the waiting room to a window and holding aside her veil looked out At first she could descry only a few dim lights and these blurred in her sight As her eyes grew accustomed to the darkness she saw a superbly built horse standing near the window Beyond was a bare square Or if it was a street it was the widest one Madeline had ever seen The dim lights shone from low flat buildings She made out the dark shapes of many horses all standing motionless with drooping heads
