The Military And Modernization:

Military and Modernization, the Bienen, The Military and Modernization Henry Bienen, 1971 The background to contemporary study of militaries and modernization by H Bienen Bibliography p 35 39 Armed Force organizations by M J Levy Jr Political development and military intervention in Latin America by M C Needler The military and political change in Asia by J P Lovell and C I E Kim Swords and ploughshares the Turkish Army as a modernizing force by D Lerner and R D Robinson The army politics and the people by A Iskenderov Political development and political decay by S P Huntington The African military and political development by C E Welch Jr Military Modernization and the Russian Ground Forces Rod Thornton, 2011-06-01 This monograph examines the recent process of organizational change in the Russian ground forces It begins by charting the whole post Soviet military reform debate This debate was dominated on the one hand by those seeking to make the armed forces more professional flexible and adroit and thus better suited to the security demands of a major 21st century power and on the other hand by senior military figures wedded to the concepts of mass and a conscriptbased military It was actually only after the war with Georgia in 2008 and when military opposition was weakened that change within the ground forces could begin in earnest New command tiers were established divisions became brigades and the idea of absorbing professional soldiers into the ground forces was refined The problems of generating a suitable corps of non commissioned officers of training suitable officers and of marrying equipment to strategic need are all issues covered here This work concludes with the thought that even though the changes being introduced in the ground forces look dramatic they cannot be implemented overnight The road towards fundamental change where Russia s ground forces are concerned will be quite a long one Change is not a common commodity in Russia The country whether as Tsarist Russia the Soviet Union or as today s democratic manifestation is not one characterized by entrepreneurship drive and innovation Rather as any historian of this land would aver it is one beset by torpor indolence and conservatism So the current ambition of the political leadership in Russia to push through a state wide process of modernizatsiya modernization is bound to be one that to a large degree must fall on deaf ears And while the main target of this process is obviously the economy the Russian military has also been asked to undertake considerable reform For the political leaders involved in trying to push through such reform the task has naturally not been easy The military hierarchy in Russia itself imbued with considerable institutional power has been doing its best to stand against change against those reforms that threaten not just the comfort of familiar strategies structures and standard operating procedures but also the individual stakes of senior officers within the various military organizations Ultimately the proposed reforms threaten the very jobs of such officers The Russian military as a whole does not want to modernize or rather it does not want to be modernized in the way that its political masters want The aim here is to analyze this current process of Russian military modernization More specifically this work is concerned with examining modernization in the Russian army and particularly in the ground 2 forces While making occasional comments about the airborne forces this is an arm of service separate from the ground forces In this monograph the term army will be used to include both airborne and ground forces As a point of detail the Russian word armiya is often mistranslated as army when it actually means all of the country's armed forces i e the range of armed services controlled by the Ministry of Defense MoD including the navy and the air force This causes some confusion for Western analysts particularly in trying to establish the actual manpower figures that relate to the armiya Such an issue is compounded by the tendency of Russian observers and analysts to be somewhat inaccurate with their use of figures

Military Modernization and the Russian Ground Forces Rod Thorton, 2025-05-22 Russia's political leaders are currently pushing a state and society wide process of modernization The Russian military a deeply conservative institution is being asked to accept fundamental changes that threaten the very livelihoods of those being asked to implement them New structures can be created and new equipment and technologies procured but the crucial element is the degree to which such changes are accepted by the human element This is often the most difficult aspect in any process of organizational change It is no wonder that the military modernization process is progressing slowly in Russia The Russian ground forces will not be very different in the next few years than they are now Time and future investment will eventually produce the more refined army that a host of Russian politicians have wished to see But it will take time and investment This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it This work was reproduced from the original artifact and remains as true to the original work as possible Therefore you will see the original copyright references library stamps as most of these works have been housed in our most important libraries around the world and other notations in the work This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work As a reproduction of a historical artifact this work may contain missing or blurred pages poor pictures errant marks etc Scholars believe and we concur that this work is important enough to be preserved reproduced and made generally available to the public We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant

Explaining Contemporary Asian Military Modernization Sheryn Lee, 2021-04-19 This book proposes a novel theoretical framework of interactive arming in order to explain armament dynamics in contemporary Asia Frequently the modernisation of contemporary naval forces in Asia is described as an arms race with the underlying assumption being that weapons acquisitions and increases in defence expenditure are competitive and bilateral and due to conflicting purposes or mutual fears This book argues that the concept of an arms race is an unsuitable one for explaining contemporary military modernisation in 21st century Asia Instead it proposes a novel and innovative concept of interactive arming and argues that what drives conflict is political rivalry not weapons acquisitions Instead of perceiving arming as abnormal behaviour the book views arming as a natural strategic behaviour of states and military modernisation as a basic requirement for a state's ability to survive This book will be of much interest to students of Asian security strategic studies and international relations in general Military Modernization and the Russian Ground Forces [Enlarged Edition] Rod Thornton, U. S. Army War College, Strategic Studies Institute, 2013-07-16 Russia's political leaders are currently pushing a state and society wide process of modernization The Russian military a deeply conservative institution is being asked to accept fundamental changes that threaten the very livelihoods of those being asked to implement them New structures can be created and new equipment and technologies procured but the crucial element is the degree to which such changes are accepted by the human element This is often the most difficult aspect in any process of organizational change It is no wonder that the military modernization process is progressing slowly in Russia The Russian ground forces will not be very different in the next few years than they are now Time and future investment will eventually produce the more refined army that a host of Russian politicians have wished to see But it will take time and investment Military Modernization in an Era of Uncertainty National Bureau of Asian Research (U.S.), 2005 Focuses on the defense capabilities of key Asian powers in the context of their grand strategies Through a combination of country regional and topical studies the book assesses how Asian states are modernizing their military programs in response to China's rise as a regional power the war on terrorism changes in U S force posture the revolution in military affairs and local security dilemmas In addition to this central theme each chapter examines the changing balance of power in Asia and identifies likely threats and opportunities that may arise in the next five years Military Review, 2005 The Handbook of European Defence Policies and Armed Forces Hugo Meijer, Marco Wyss, 2018-06-22 The armed forces of Europe have undergone a dramatic transformation since the collapse of the Soviet Union The Handbook of European Defence Policies and Armed Forces provides the first comprehensive analysis of national security and defence policies strategies doctrines capabilities and military operations as well as the alliances and partnerships of European armed forces in response to the security challenges Europe has faced since the end of the cold war A truly cross European comparison of the evolution of national defence policies and armed forces remains a notable blind spot in the existing literature The Handbook of European Defence Policies and Armed Forces aims to fill this gap with fifty one contributions on European defence and international security from around the world The six parts focus on country based assessments of the evolution of the national defence policies of Europe's major medium and lesser powers since the end of the cold war the alliances and security partnerships developed by European states to cooperate in the provision of national security the security challenges faced by European states and their armed forces ranging from interstate through intra state and transnational the national security strategies and doctrines developed in response to these challenges the military capabilities and the underlying defence and technological industrial base brought to bear to support national strategies and doctrines and finally the national or multilateral military operations by European armed forces The contributions to The Handbook collectively demonstrate the fruitfulness of giving analytical precedence back to the comparative study of national defence policies and armed forces across Europe Report to Congress of the U.S.-China
