Static in the System Dr. Meredith C. Ward, 2019-03-05 In this rich study of noise in American film going culture Meredith C Ward shows how aurality can reveal important fissures in American motion picture history enabling certain types of listening cultures to form across time Connecting this history of noise in the cinema to a greater sonic culture Static in the System shows how cinema sound was networked into a broader constellation of factors that affected social power gender sexuality class the built environment and industry and how these factors in turn came to fruition in cinema's soundscape Focusing on theories of power as they manifest in noise the history of noise in electro acoustics with the coming of film sound architectural acoustics as they were manipulated in cinema theaters and the role of the urban environment in affecting mobile listening and the avoidance of noise Ward analyzes the powerful relationship between aural cultural history and

The Metareferential Turn in Contemporary Arts and Media Werner Wolf, 2011-01-01 One possible description of the contemporary medial landscape in Western culture is that it has gone meta to an unprecedented extent so that a remarkable meta culture has emerged. Indeed, metareference, i.e. self-reflexive comments on or references to various kinds of media-related aspects of a given medial artefact or performance, specific media and arts or the media in general, is omnipresent and can nowadays be encountered in high art and literature as frequently as in their popular counterparts in the traditional media as well as in new media. From the Simpsons pop music children's literature computer games and pornography to the contemporary visual arts feature film postmodern fiction drama and even architecture everywhere one can find metareferential explorations, comments on or criticism of representation, medial conventions or modes of production and reception and related issues. Within individual media and genres, notably in research on postmodernist metafiction, this outspoken tendency towards metaization is known well enough and various reasons have been given for it. Yet never has there been an attempt to account for what one may aptly term the current metareferential turn on a larger transmedial scale. This is what The Metareferential Turn in Contemporary Arts and Media: Forms, Functions, Attempts at Explanation undertakes to do as a sequel to its predecessor, the volume Metareference across Media vol. 4 in the series Studies in Intermediality which was dedicated to theoretical issues and transhistorical case studies. Coming from diverse disciplinary and methodological backgrounds, the contributors to the present volume propose explanations of impressive subtlety, breadth and depth for the current situation in addition to exploring individual forms and functions of metareference which may be linked with particular explanations. As expected, there is no monocausal reason to be found for the situation under scrutiny; yet the proposals made have in their combination a remarkable explanatory power which contributes to a better understanding of an important facet of current media production and reception. The essays assembled in the volume, which also contains an introduction with a detailed survey over the possibilities of accounting for the metareferential turn, will be relevant to students and scholars from a wide variety of fields: cultural history at large, intermediality and media studies as well as more particularly literary studies, music, film and art history.

Graves de Mortis Mathew Charpentier, 2011-04-26 The Graves de Mortis is a tome older than humanity itself. Within its cursed pages lie ineffable horrors and suggestions most foul. It has ended up in the hands of famous occultists, foolish men, powerful witches and vile priests dedicated to blasphemous deities. This anthology follows five such stories.
