The Case for a Royal Commission on the Penal System Louis Blom-Cooper and Seán McConville, 2014-11-19 An initiative supported by leading political academic religious and professional figures and in association with Queen Mary University of London Virtually half a century has passed since the last Royal Commission on the Penal System was dissolved its work uncompleted Looking forwards six members of the Commission asserted that after some years a new Royal Commission would be of great public service As commentators writers and practitioners Sir Louis Blom Cooper QC and Professor Seán McConville have many decades of experience of penal policy and practice Some 20 years ago they urged the appointment of a new Royal Commission on the subject They have since pressed their case in letters to major newspapers and in earlier writings In this publication the momentum for which is supported by leading figures they make the case for a new Royal Commission that will be reflective effective and swift capable of building consensus and providing directions for generations They argue that penal policy is fragmented and frequently irrational contradictory counterproductive insubstantial and put together in a haphazard way The dynamics and pressures of party politics inevitably mean that penal policy often emerges in response to hard cases and headlines As this pamphlet claims broader and more considered views drawing on evidence and seeking to maximise social good cannot be delivered by politicians afraid of missing an opportunity to score party political points

SNI National Criminal Justice Reference Service (U.S.), National Criminal Justice Reference Service (U.S.), 1980 Towards the Development of the International Penal System Róisín Mulgrew, 2013-07-11 Based on extensive empirical research this groundbreaking book describes and analyses existing systems for enforcing sentences of imprisonment imposed by international criminal courts and makes recommendations for the strategic and structural development of the international penal system. In particular, it advocates a resocialisation focused international penal policy delivered using restorative justice modalities post conviction and the creation of an accountable international prison system. Singly or combined, these developments will contribute to the institutionalisation of the international penal system and enhance the international nature of the sanction, the international control over the way international punishment is enforced and the equal treatment of international prisoners. These developments will also help to ensure that international punishment is principled and progressive and implemented in a humane and effective system.

Conversion and the Rehabilitation of the Penal System Andrew Skotnicki, 2019-03-01

The Cincinnati Penal Congress of 1870 ushered in the era of progressive penology: the use of statistical and social scientific methodologies, commitment to psychiatric and therapeutic interventions, and a new innovation, the reformatory, as the locus for the application of these initiatives. The prisoner was now seen as a specimen to be analyzed, treated, and properly socialized into the triumphal current of American social and economic life. The Progressive rehabilitative initiatives succumbed in the 1970s to withering criticism from the proponents of equally futile strategies for addressing the crime problem: retribution, deterrence, and selective incapacitation. The early Christian community developed a methodology for correcting human error that featured the unprecedented belief that a period of time spent in a given penitential locale, with the aid and encouragement of the community, was sufficient in and of itself to heal the alienation and self-loathing caused by sin and to lead an individual to full reincorporation into the community. The correctional practice was based upon the conviction that cooperative sociability or conversion is possible regardless of the specific offense, without any need to inflict suffering or to use the act of punishment as a warning to potential offenders or to undertake programmatic interventions into the lives of the incarcerated for the purpose of rehabilitating them. Andrew Skotnicki contends that the modern practice of criminal detention is a protracted exercise in needless violence predicated upon two foundational errors. The first is an inability to see the imprisoned as human beings fully capable of responding to an affirmative accompaniment rather than maltreatment and invasive forms of therapy. The second is a pervasive dualism that constructs a barrier between detainees and those empowered to supervise, rehabilitate, and punish them. In this book, Skotnicki argues that the criminal justice system can only be rehabilitated by eliminating punishment and policies based upon deterrence, rehabilitation, and the incapacitation of the urban poor, and returning to the original justification for the practice of confinement: conversion.

Medicine, the Penal System and Sexual Crimes in England, 1919-1960s Janet Weston, 2017-12-14

Sexual crime past and present is rarely far from the headlines. How these crimes are punished, policed, and understood has changed considerably over the last century. From hormone injections to cognitive behavioural therapy, medical and psychological approaches to sexual offenders have proliferated. This book sets out the history of such theories and treatments in England Beginning in the early 20th century it traces the evolution of medical interest in the mental state of those convicted of sexual crime As part of a broader interest in individualised responses to crime as a means to rehabilitation doctors offered new explanations for some sexual crimes proposed new solutions and attempted to deliver new cures From indecent exposure to homosexuality between men from sadistic violence to thefts of underwear from washing lines the interpretation and treatment of some sexual offences was thought to be complex Of less medical interest though were offences against children prostitution and rape Using a range of material including medical and criminological texts trial proceedings government reports newspapers and autobiographies and memoirs Janet Weston offers powerful insights into changing medico legal practices and attitudes towards sex and health She highlights the importance of prison doctors and rehabilitative programmes within prisons psychoanalytically minded private practitioners and the interactions between medical and legal systems as medical theories were put into practice She also reveals the extent and legacy of medical thought as well as the limitations of a medical approach to sexual crime
