Keeves, Ryo Watanabe, 2013-11-11 The aim of the Handbook is to present readily accessible but scholarly sources of information about educational research in the Asia Pacific region The scale and scope of the Handbook is such that the articles included in it provide substantive contributions to knowledge and understanding of education in the Asia region In so doing the articles present the problems and issues facing education in the region and the findings of research conducted within the region that contribute to the resolution of these problems and issues Moreover since new problems and issues are constantly arising the articles in the Handbook also indicate the likely directions of future developments The different articles within the Handbook seek to conceptualize the problems in each specific content area under review provide an integration of the research conducted within that area the theoretical basis of the research the practical implications of the research and the contribution of the research towards the resolution of the problems identified Thus the articles do not involve the reporting of newly conducted research but rather require a synthesis of the research undertaken in a particular area with reference to the research methods employed and the theoretical frameworks on which the research is based In general the articles do not advocate a single point of view but rather present alternative points of view and comment on the debate and disagreements associated with the conduct and findings of the research Furthermore it should be noted that the Handbook is not concerned with research methodology and only considers the methods employed in inquiry in so far as the particular methods of research contribute to the effective investigation of problems and issues that have arisen in the conduct and

Crossing the Neoliberal Line Katharyne Mitchell, 2004 As wealthy immigrants from Hong Kong began to settle in Vancouver British Columbia their presence undid a longstanding liberal consensus that defined politics and spatial inequality there Riding the currents of a neoliberal wave these immigrants became the center of vigorous public controversies around planning home building multiculturalism and the future of Vancouver Because of their class status and their financial capacity to remake space in their own ways they became the key to a reshaping of Vancouver through struggles that are necessarily both global and local in context involving global real estate enterprises the Canadian state city residents and others In her examination of the story of the integration of transnational migrants from Hong Kong Katharyne Mitchell draws out the myriad ways in which liberalism is profoundly spatial varying greatly depending on the geographical context In doing so Mitchell shows why understanding the historically and geographically contingent nature of liberal thought and practice is crucial particularly as we strive to understand the ongoing societies transition to neoliberalism Author note Katharyne Mitchell is Professor of Geography and the Simpson Professor of the Public Humanities at the University of Washington
