The Information Revolution and National Security , The Information Revolution and National Security Stuart J. D. Schwartzstein,1996 The Information Revolution and National Security Thomas E. Copeland,2000-08-01 The current era has seen more rapid and extensive change than any time in human history The profusion of information and the explosion of information technology is the driver reshaping all aspects of social political cultural and economic life The effects of the information revolution are particularly profound in the realm of national security strategy They are creating new opportunities for those who master them The U S military for instance is exploring ways to seize information superiority during conflicts and thus gain decisive advantages over its opponents But the information revolution also creates new security threats and vulnerabilities No nation has made more effective use of the information revolution than the United States but none is more dependent on information technology To protect American security then military leaders and defense policymakers must understand the information revolution The Information Revolution and National Security Thomas E. Copeland,2005 The essays in this volume are intended to contribute to such an understanding They grew from a December 1999 conference co sponsored by the U S Army War College Strategic Studies Institute and the University of Pittsburgh Matthew B Ridgway Center for International Security Studies The conference brought together some of the foremost members of the academic strategic studies community with representatives of the U S Government and U S military As could be expected when examining a topic as complex as the relationship between the information revolution and national security the presentations and discussions were far ranging covering such issues as the global implications of the information revolution the need for a national information security strategy and the role of information in U S military operations While many more questions emerged than answers the conference did suggest some vital tasks that military leaders and defense policymakers must undertake Foreword P v second paragraph The Information Revolution and National Security Thomas E. Goldman,2004-08-02 As the activities of individuals organizations and nations increasingly occur in cyberspace the security of those activities is becoming a growing concern Political economic and military leaders must manage and reduce the level of risk associated with threats from hostile states malevolent nonstate actors such as organized terrorist groups or individual hackers and high tech accidents The impact of the information technology revolution on warfare global stability governance and even the meaning of existing security constructs like deterrence is significant These essays examine the ways in which the information technology revolution has affected the logic of deterrence and crisis management definitions of peace and war democratic constraints on conflict the conduct of and military organization for war and the growing role of the private sector in providing security National Security in the Information Age ,1996 The John M.
