1945

The T-34 was the most common tank in the world during the war. It was a medium tank, meaning it was larger than a light tank but smaller than a heavy tank. It was designed for versatility, able to fight in a variety of terrain. The T-34 was also the most reliable tank, with a simple design that made it easy to maintain. It was the backbone of the Soviet tank force, and it played a key role in the final push into Berlin.
