Northwest and Alaska Troy Elizabeth Hall, 2009 Population growth in Oregon Washington and Alaska is expected to increase demand for outdoor recreation on public land This trend will be tempered by changes in the sociodemographic composition of the population Among sociodemographic characteristics different ages and incomes correspond to different participation rates Although older Americans are participating more participation is still lower among this group for active pursuits Hence as the population ages demand for passive activities may increase Low income people participate at a much lower rate than higher income people in outdoor recreation and the growing disparity between the wealthy and poor may create inequities in opportunities for participation State recreation planning documents for Oregon Washington and Alaska have identified this issue as a significant concern for recreation providers Another important factor in recreation trends in the region is ethnicity different ethnic groups participate in outdoor recreation at different rates exhibit some different preferences for specific activities and use recreation sites in different ways In Alaska the number of Asian Pacific Islanders is expected to quadruple by 2025 in Oregon the Hispanic population may triple by 2025 and in Washington both these segments of the population may double Sustainable Development and Geographical Space Heikki Jussila, Roser

Majoral, 2018-05-08 This title was first published in 2002 While world wide political sociological and economic processes encourage the marginalization of peripheral areas the general degradation of the ecosystem increasingly affects marginal populations as they are more likely to use natural resources The fact that these communities suffer greatly from environmental economic and social problems also tends to prevent them adopting a sustainable use of these local resources Using a series of international case studies from both developed and developing countries this remarkable volume explores issues of sustainable development in marginalized regions of the world It discusses population development and sustainability as well as environment and sustainability from the point of view of regional development It also examines globalization and the role of education in encouraging a sustainable path of development A common focus shared by the contributors is that of the human aspects of development as well as the concept of sustainability and its usefulness in geographical and economic research The volume provides an insightful overview of the issues that touch sustainability in marginal and critical regions
