This book investigates how decolonising the curriculum might work in English studies one of the fields that bears the most robust traces of its imperial and colonial roots from the perspective of the semi periphery of the academic world system It takes the University of Lisbon as a point of departure to explore broader questions of how the field can be rethought from within through Anglophone post coloniality and an institutional location in a department of English while also considering forces from without as the arguments in this book issue from a specific liminal positionality outside the Anglosphere The first half of the book examines the critical practice of and the political push for decolonising the university and the curriculum advancing existing scholarship with this focus on semi peripheral perspectives The second half comprises two theoretically informed and classroom oriented case studies of adaptation of the literary canon a part of model syllabi that are designed to raise awareness of and encourage an understanding of a global pluriversal literary history Reading behind the lines

Natasha Alden,2015-11-01 This book takes the concept of postmemory developed in Holocaust studies and applies it for the first time to novels by contemporary British writers Focusing on war fiction Alden builds upon current scholarship on historical fiction and memory studies and extends the field by exploring how the use of historical research within fiction illuminates the ways in which we remember and recreate the past Using postmemory to unlock both the transgenerational aspects of the novels discussed and the development of historiographic metafiction Alden provides a ground breaking analysis of the nature and potential of contemporary historical fiction By examining the patterns and motivations behind authors translations of material from the historical record into fiction Alden also asks to what extent such writing is necessarily metafictional Ultimately this study offers an updated answer to the question that historical fiction has always posed what can fiction do with history that history cannot
