

The Hippocratic Oath

I Swear by Apollo the Physician and Aesculapius and by Hygeia and Panacea and by all the gods and goddesses, making them my judges, that this mine oath will I fulfill as far as power and discernment shall be mine: Him who taught me this art will I esteem equally with my parents; he shall partake of my livelihood, and, if in want, shall share my substance. I will regard his offspring as my brothers, teaching them this art without fee or stipulation if they shall wish to learn it.

I Will Instruct by precept, by discourse and in all other ways my sons, the sons of him who taught me and those disciples bound by oath and stipulation according to medical law, but to no other person.

I Will Carry Out that regimen which, according to my power and discernment, shall be for the benefit of the sick and will keep them from harm and wrong. To none will I give a deadly drug even if solicited, nor offer counsel to such an end. Likewise, to no woman will I give a destructive suppository; but, guiltless and hallowed, will I keep my life and mine art.

I Will Cut no one whatever for the stone, giving way to those who work at this practice. Into whatsoever houses I shall enter I will go for the benefit of the sick, abstaining from all voluntary wrong and corruption and from lasciviousness with women or men--free or slaves.

I Will Keep Silence regarding that which, within or without my practice, I shall see or hear in the lives of men which should not be made public; holding such things unfit to be spoken.

And Now if I shall fulfill this oath and break it not, may the fruits of life and of art be mine; may I be honored of all men for all time; the opposite if I shall transgress and be forsworn.
