

Clinical Values of Serum Uric Acid Levels in the Occurrence of Cognitive Impairment in Alcohol-Dependent Patients

ABSTRACT

Objective: Studies have confirmed that uric acid is involved in the regulation of cognitive function. This study aimed to investigate the expression of serum uric acid in alcohol-dependent patients and evaluate its clinical diagnostic value for cognitive impairment.

Methods: Blood sample was collected for assessment of serum uric acid levels. Montreal Cognitive Assessment Scale scores were obtained to assess cognitive function. Anxiety and depression scores on the Symptom Check List 90 scale were used to assess mental health status. The alcohol-dependent patients were divided into non-cognitive impairment and cognitive impairment groups according to Montreal Cognitive Assessment Scale score, and the serum uric acid levels of these groups were analyzed. The receiver operating characteristic curve evaluated the diagnostic value of serum uric acid in cognitive impairment patients. Pearson correlation coefficient evaluated the correlation between uric acid and Montreal Cognitive Assessment Scale score, anxiety score, and depression score. Multivariate logistic regression analyzed the association between each index and cognitive impairment in patients.

Results: Serum uric acid was higher in patients than in controls ( $P < .001$ ). Uric acid was significantly increased in cognitive impairment patients than in non-cognitive impairment patients ( $P < .001$ ). Serum uric acid has certain diagnostic value in patients with cognitive impairment. Anxiety score and depression score were positively correlated with uric acid level, while Montreal Cognitive Assessment Scale score was negatively correlated with uric acid. Additionally, serum uric acid, Montreal Cognitive Assessment Scale score, and anxiety and depression scores were the risk factors for cognitive impairment in patients ( $P < .05$ ).

Conclusions: The abnormal expression of uric acid has a high diagnostic accuracy for distinguishing cognitive impairment from non-cognitive impairment.

Keywords: Alcohol dependence, cognitive impairment, uric acid, diagnosis

Introduction

Alcohol is an important central nervous system depressant, and repeated heavy drinking can cause chronic and permanent damage to the structure and function of brain tissue.<sup>1</sup> According to the statistics of the World Health Organization, there are more than 2 billion drinkers in the world, of which more than 70 million are diagnosed with alcohol-related disorders.<sup>2</sup> Alcohol abuse and dependence have led to serious social and medical problems. In China, data released in 2019 showed that per capita alcohol consumption increased from 4.1 L in 2005 to 7.2 L in 2016, with an increase of 76%. Conversely, the lifetime abstinence rate dropped from 50.9% to 42.1%.<sup>3</sup> According to a report published in The Lancet in 2020, alcohol consumption was the primary risk factor for death among people aged 25-49. In 2019, nearly 2.5 million people died from alcohol consumption, of which more than 2 million were men.<sup>4</sup> Any health benefits of drinking alcohol may be outweighed by its toxic effects, which will not
