Side of the Story Molly Hite, 2018-03-05 According to Molly Hite a number of influential contemporary women novelists notably Jean Rhys Doris Lessing Alice Walker and Margaret Atwood attempt innovations in narrative form that are more radical in their implications than the dominant modes of fictional experimentation characterized as postmodernist In The Other Side of the Story Hite makes the point that these innovations which distinguish the genre she calls contemporary feminist narrative are more radical precisely because their context is the critique of a culture and a literary tradition apprehended as profoundly masculinist

Life and Letters in Jean Rhys's Works Rusz Tímea Julianna, 2015 Commonwealth of Letters Peter J. Kalliney, 2013-07-26 Commonwealth of Letters examines midcentury literary institutions integral to modernism and postcolonial writing Several organizations central to interwar modernism such as the BBC influential publishers and university English departments became important sites in the emergence of postcolonial literature after the war How did some of modernism's leading figures of the 1930s such as T S Eliot, Louis MacNeice and Stephen Spender come to admire late colonial and early postcolonial literature in the 1950s. Similarly, why did late colonial and early postcolonial writers including Chinua Achebe, Kamau Brathwaite, Claude McKay and Ngugi wa Thiong'o actively seek alliances with metropolitan intellectuals? Peter Kalliney's original and extensive archival work on modernist cultural institutions demonstrates that this disparate group of intellectuals had strong professional incentives to treat one another more as fellow literary professionals and less as political or cultural antagonists. Surprisingly, metropolitan intellectuals and their late colonial counterparts leaned heavily on modernist theories of aesthetic autonomy to facilitate their collaborative ventures. For white metropolitan writers, T S Eliot's notion of impersonality could help recruit new audiences and conspirators from colonized regions of the world. For black colonial writers, aesthetic autonomy could be used to imagine a literary sphere uniquely resistant to the forms of racial prejudice endemic to the colonial system. This strategic collaboration did not last forever, but as Commonwealth of Letters shows, it left a lasting imprint on the ultimate disposition of modernism and the evolution of postcolonial literature.

Snow on the Cane Fields Judith L. Raitskin, 1996. Snow on the Cane Fields was first published in 1995. Minnesota Archive Editions uses digital technology to make long unavailable books once again accessible and are published unaltered from the original University of Minnesota Press editions. In a probing analysis of creole women's writing over the past century, Judith Raitskin explores the workings and influence of cultural and linguistic colonialism. Tracing the transnational and racial meanings of creole identity, Raitskin looks at four English-speaking writers from South Africa and the Caribbean: Olive Schreiner, Jean Rhys, Michelle Cliff and Zoë Wicomb. She examines their work in light of the discourses of their times: nineteenth-century race science and imperialistic rhetoric, turn of the century anti-Semitism, sentiment and feminist pacifism, postcolonial theory and apartheid legislation. In their writing and in their multiple identities, these women highlight the gendered nature of race, citizenship, culture and the language of literature. Raitskin shows how each writer expresses her particular ambivalences and divided loyalties, both enforcing and challenging the proprietary British perspective on colonial history, culture and language. A new perspective on four writers and their uneasy places in colonial culture, Snow on the Cane Fields reveals the value of pursuing a feminist approach to questions of national, political and racial identity.

Judith Raitskin is assistant professor of women's studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara.

Su, 2005-11-24 Images of loss and yearning played a crucial role in literary texts written in the later part of the twentieth century Despite deep cultural differences novelists from Africa the Caribbean Great Britain and the United States share a sense that the economic social and political forces associated with late modernity have evoked widespread nostalgia within the communities in which they write In this original and wide ranging study John J Su explores the relationship between nostalgia and ethics in novels across the English speaking world He challenges the tendency in literary studies to characterise memory as positive and nostalgia as necessarily negative Instead this book argues that nostalgic fantasies are crucial to the ethical visions presented by topical novels From Jean Rhys to Wole Soyinka and from V S Naipaul to Toni Morrison Su identifies nostalgia as a central concern in the twentieth century novel
