For her in particular this perilous journey is more than especially fraught with personal dangers and difficulty. More than thirty years later following the first of two British snap elections in 1974 ex newspaperman turned government press chief John Colebrook has been told his face no longer fits in Whitehall. Sent home to cool his heels while his future is decided he is secretly approached by Sally Hegarty a rising young civil servant who enlists him to investigate the wartime activities of a prominent industrialist. His searches begin to reveal a connection with Madame Lamartine's journey and a murky wartime conspiracy in Lisbon whose instigators may still be active in public life. Colebrook begins to suspect he too is under surveillance and starts to have doubts about Sally's real motives for involving him. But he is torn by his feelings for her. The Spectator ,1849 A weekly review of politics literature theology and art. Life of Lamartine \(Classic Reprint\) Margaret Domville,2018-01-14 Excerpt from Life of Lamartine. The father of Alphonse de Lamartine was a cadet of an old Burgundian family his mother the daughter of M Des Roys an officer in the household of the Duke of Orleans. There had been in the circumstances of their marriage more of romance than is usual in France. Mademoiselle des Roys while still a child received a nomination entitling her to become a canoness in the richly endowed Chapter of Sens and having reached the age of fifteen was shortly to take vows which though not cutting her off from the world would have bound her to a single life when she met at the house of his sister herself a canoness of Salles the Chevalier de Lamartine. A few weeks later the Chevalier obtained Mademoiselle des Roys consent to ask her hand in marriage. The want of fortune and family prejudices were formidable obstacles but the lovers remained constant and after three years of hope deferred they were united. Just at the eve of the Revolution.
