BRONFENBRENNER,2009-06-30 Here is a book that challenges the very basis of the way psychologists have studied child development According to Urie Bronfenbrenner one of the world s foremost developmental psychologists laboratory studies of the child s behavior sacrifice too much in order to gain experimental control and analytic rigor Laboratory observations he argues too often lead to the science of the strange behavior of children in strange situations with strange adults for the briefest possible periods of time To understand the way children actually develop Bronfenbrenner believes that it will be necessary to observe their behavior in natural settings while they are interacting with familiar adults over prolonged periods of time This book offers an important blueprint for constructing such a new and ecologically valid psychology of development The blueprint includes a complete conceptual framework for analysing the layers of the environment that have a formative influence on the child This framework is applied to a variety of settings in which children commonly develop ranging from the pediatric ward to daycare school and various family configurations The result is a rich set of hypotheses about the developmental consequences of various types of environments Where current research bears on these hypotheses Bronfenbrenner marshals the data to show how an ecological theory can be tested Where no relevant data exist he suggests new and interesting ecological experiments that might be undertaken to resolve current unknowns Bronfenbrenner s groundbreaking program for reform in developmental psychology is certain to be controversial His argument flies in the face of standard psychological procedures and challenges psychology to become more relevant to the ways in which children actually develop It is a challenge psychology can ill afford to ignore ERIC Directory of Education-related Information Centers ,2000 Families as Learning Environments for Children Luis Laosa,2013-11-11 The chapters in this volume reflect the work and thoughts of a group of researchers interested in studying families as learning environments for children As we proceed in our quest to identify and understand with some specificity the familial factors associated with the intellectual and social development of children the time is ripe for the reintroduction of families as units of study in psychological and educational research With the increasing focus on the changing organization of the modern family it is of more than academic interest to identify those variables that play a significant role in the child s development Such knowledge certainly should help in the planning and design of appropriate and credible applications These chapters representing a broad spectrum of research derive from papers presented and discussed at a working conference on families as learning environments sponsored by Educational Testing Service in Prince ton New Jersey Following the conference the papers were revised and edited for inclusion in this volume We are indebted to a number of people whose contributions helped make the conference a success Samuel J Messick and Winton H Manning for their support Jan Flaughner Jessie Cryer Linda Kozelski and Betty Clausen for assistance with local arrangements and William Nemceff Kathleen Lingle and Kalina Gonska for help with the audio recording of the proceedings LUIS M LAOSA IRVING E SIGEL vii Contents Introduction XI Luis M Laosa Chapter 1 Families as Facilitators of Children s Intellectual Development at 3 Years of Age A Causal Analysis
