Constructing Social Problems Malcolm Spector, There is no adequate definition of social problems within sociology and there is not and never has been a sociology of social problems That observation is the point of departure of this book The authors aim to provide such a definition and to prepare the ground for the empirical study of social problems They are aware that their objective will strike many fellow sociologists as ambitious perhaps even arrogant Their work challenges sociologists who have over a period of fifty years written treatises on social problems produced textbooks cataloguing the nature distribution and causes of these problems and taught many sociology courses It is only natural that the authors work will be viewed as controversial in light of the large literature which has established a sociology of a wide range of social problems the sociology of race relations prostitution poverty crime mental illness and so forth In the 1970s when the authors were preparing for a seminar on the sociology of social problems their review of the literature revealed the absence of any systematic coherent statement of theory or method in the study of social problems For many years the subject was listed and offered by university departments of sociology as a service course to present undergraduates with what they should know about the various social pathologies that exist in their society This conception of social problems for several decades has been reflected in the substance and quality of the literature dominated by textbooks In Constructing Social Problems the authors propose that social problems be conceived as the claims making activities of individuals or groups regarding social conditions they consider unjust immoral or harmful and that should be addressed This perspective as the authors have formulated it conceives of social problems as a process of interaction that produces social problems as social facts in society The authors further propose that this process and the social facts it produces are the data to be researched for the sociology of social problems This volume will be of interest to those concerned with the discipline of sociology especially its current theoretical development and growth Malcolm Spector was professor of sociology at McGill University in Montreal Canada John I Kitsuse is professor emeritus at the University of California at Santa Cruz He is co author with Leonard Broom of The Managed Casualty The Japanese American Family in World War II and co editor with Theodore R Sarbin of Constructing the Social

The Sociology of Social Problems Adam Jamrozik, Luisa Nocella, 1998-07-13 Social problems such as unemployment poverty and drug addiction are a fact of life in industrialised societies This book examines the sociology of social problems from interesting and challenging perspectives It analyses how social problems emerge and are defined as such who takes responsibility for them who is threatened by them and how they are managed solved or ignored The authors examine and critique existing theories of social problems before developing their own theoretical framework Their theory of residualist conversion of social problems explains how certain social problems threaten legitimate power structures so that problems of a social or political nature are transformed into personal problems and the helping professions are left to intervene This book will become a key reference on class inequality and social intervention and an important text for students in sociology and social work courses
