

Governor White pledged to resist federal interference, and the winner of the primary, J. P. Coleman, the state attorney general, declared, "we can run our elections without the help of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and we don't appreciate Mr. Brownell's interference."²¹

In Tallahatchie County, where the trial of Till's killers would take place, no one had to worry about African American ballots being thrown away. A black majority county in 1955—indeed almost two to one, black to white—not a single African American was allowed to register, so none could vote, serve on a jury, or run for office. And if denying blacks their civil liberties wasn't enough, there was always the threat of violence. The day after Till's body was found, alongside the Communist's front-page coverage, a small headline declared, "Fiery Cross Is Burned in Jackson." The KKK itself had faded in recent years but had not disappeared entirely, and sharp memories of Klan terror lingered among the black population. Roy Wilkins and the NAACP may have engaged in some hyperbolic rhetoric about Emmett Till, but they were right—the murder was not merely the act of two depraved individuals. It took willful myopia not to see that Till's murder was embedded in a culture of white violence, a social structure of white privilege, and a deepening campaign to resist fundamental moves toward racial equality. This was a racial killing in a racially fraught state.²²

Civil rights groups, especially the NAACP, had long pushed for anti-lynching legislation that would give the federal government an opening to intervene. Denying that Till's murder was a lynching highlighted why southern congressmen had stilled federal legislation for decades. Days after he went missing, telegrams and letters came into the White House from Mamie Till Bradley, her attorney William Henry Huff, the Chicago Defender publisher John Sengstacke, the Illinois governor William Stratton, a dozen US congressmen and senators, and countless citizens, all of them asking for federal intervention in the case. "I strongly urge," Chicago's young mayor Richard J. Daley wrote to President Eisenhower, "that all the facilities of the federal government be immediately utilized so that the ends of justice may be served."²³

A federal anti-lynching law would have made such intervention automatic, but lacking that, the response from presidential staffers was always the same: no one violated federal law and the perpetrators never crossed state lines, so the US government's hands were tied. Over at the Justice Department, attorneys sent out hundreds of replies to congressmen, senators, and citizens explaining there was nothing to be done. And although "Negro newspapers and colored organizations" generated "considerable pressure," the Federal Bureau of Investigation insisted that the government had no cause to intervene.²⁴

But this did not mean the FBI was uninvolved in the Till case. What worried Director J. Edgar Hoover were Communists using it for their own
