Weaving Work and Motherhood Anita Iltis Garey, 1999 In American culture the image of balancing work and family life is often represented in the glossy shot of the executive track woman balancing cell phone laptop and baby In Weaving Work and Motherhood Anita Iltis Garey focuses not on the corporate executives so frequently represented in American ads and magazines but rather on the women in jobs that typify the vast majority of women's employment in the United States A sociologist and work and family expert Garey situates her research in the health service industry Interviewing a racially and ethnically diverse group of women hospital workers clerical workers janitorial workers nurses and nurse's aids Garey analyzes what it means to be at once a mother who is employed and a worker with children Within the limits of the resources available to them women integrate their identities as workers and their identities as mothers by valuing their relation to work while simultaneously preserving cultural norms about what it means to be a good mother Some of these women work non day shifts in order to have the right blocks of time at home including for example a registered nurse who explains how working the night shift enables her to see her children off to school greet them when they return and attend school events in the way she feels good mothers should even if she finds little time for sleep Moving beyond studies of women work and family in terms of structural incompatibilities Garey challenges images of the exclusively work oriented or exclusively family oriented mother As women talk about their lives Garey focuses on the meanings of motherhood and of work that underlie their strategies for integrating employment and motherhood She replaces notions of how women balance work and family with a better understanding of how women integrate negotiate and weave together their identities as both workers and mothers Breaking new ground in the study of work and family Weaving Work and Motherhood offers new insights for those interested in sociology gender and women's studies social policy child care social welfare and health care

Breaking the Silence Yasuko I. Takezawa, 2019-06-30 This book is a unique interpretation of how wartime internment and the movement for redress affected Japanese Americans Yasuko I. Takezawa a Japanese national who has lived in the Japanese American community as well as in the larger American society has a distinctive vantage point from which to assess the changing meaning of being a Japanese American Takezawa focuses on the impact of two critical incidents in Japanese American history the wartime evacuation and internment of more than a hundred thousand individuals and the redress campaign that resulted in an official apology and reparation payments from the U S government Her book is a moving account filled with personal stories both painful and joyous told to her by Nisei and Sansei second and third generation interviewees in Seattle Covering the period before during and after World War II Takezawa captures the internal struggles of the Japanese American community in seeking redress She shows how its members have handled identity crises caused by racial discrimination evacuation and internment and the long prevalent American ideology of the melting pot She is particularly skillful in

Leng Leng Thang, 2018-05-31 A dilemma long faced by western societies how to bring the generations together is also of growing concern in the east In Japan where until recently the extended family often lived under the same roof social programs designed to facilitate interaction between old and young have proliferated Leng Leng Thang offers an in depth view of one of those programs an unusual social welfare institution called Kotoen Kotoen is a pioneering facility for multigenerational living providing both daycare for preschoolers and a home for elderly residents With its twin mottoes of fureai being in touch and daikazoku large extended family it has been the subject of widespread media attention and has served as a model for other institutions Yet Kotoen has never before been studied seriously Under its director s inspiring leadership Kotoen looks unusually promising but Thang is wary of simplistic conclusions Her interviews research and work as a volunteer at Kotoen reveal the complaints common among some elderly residents toward their surroundings in old age institutions as well as the painful persistence of the traditional family ideal Yet far from calling the experiment a failure Thang challenges accepted wisdom and so called common sense to reveal the advantages and limitations of the relationships fostered between Kotoen s grandchildren and grandparents The lessons learned from Kotoen illuminate the urgency of re engaging the generations in an aging society and provide direction for improving the quality of life for all

Kerttula,2000 Antler on the Sea is a fascinating important and near unique study of a threatened culture Colin Thubron author of In Siberia Anna M Kerttula an anthropologist offers a vivid portrayal of life in Sireniki a Siberian village on the Bering Sea Once a traditional Yup ik community it was by the final years of the Soviet Empire home to three cultural groups the Yup ik native hunters of sea mammals the Chukchi nomadic reindeer herders who had been required by the state to turn their animals over to cooperative farms and Russians of European ancestry enticed to the region by incentive programs designed to colonize the Russian Far East Kerttula who lived among the villagers for eighteen months draws on her experiences to explore how each group s beliefs and customs have transformed those of the other two Her book shows the endurance of the indigenous cultures of Far Eastern Russia despite years of intrusion by the Soviet state The author describes in rich detail how the Yup ik the Chukchi and the Russian newcomers developed a sense of cultural difference because of their separate symbolic systems and yet cohered as a community She explains that relations among the groups have become tenuous since the breakup of the Soviet Union and the subsequent collapse of the local economy Kerttula s research provides a unique perspective on today s ethnic rivalries within the former USSR She maintains that these conflicts not always expressions of ancient animosities may be efforts toward mutual understanding during times of economic and social change
