Bannon, Yvonne H. Carter, 2002-12-05 This book deals with child abuse and neglect as it presents itself in primary care. All health professionals including those who work in primary care have an important role to play in the child protection process. Inappropriate management of suspected instances of child abuse may result in serious implications for the child, family and involved professionals. Primary health care teams have specific and unmet training needs in this area and many general practitioners express anxiety regarding their involvement in child protection work. The overall aim of this book is to enable members of the primary health care team to fulfil their responsibilities in the protection of children from the threat of abuse or neglect. Readers are made aware of the skills required both to protect children and to subsequently maintain relationships with families. The contents have been extended to include child protection issues in our multi-cultural society along with comparison of different systems across Europe. The book is primarily aimed at GPs and their teams; social workers and health care managers will also benefit from its unique treatment of child protection issues in a primary care setting. This book addresses these issues with sagacity and imagination. The reader, all primary care team members would benefit from it. It is offered: facts, skills, attitudes and insights to help in this difficult area. We can all do child protection better. Let us use this book to achieve that aim. From the foreword by Professor Michael Pringle, Immediate Past Chairman, Council of Royal College of General Practitioners.

Surviving Domestic Violence Paula Wilcox, 2006-04-12 This book follows a group of women pursuing safety from abusive relationships. Seven influential social dimensions are examined: power, emotion, children, home, economic resource, informal and community support. A gendered analysis of external structural contexts as well as individual responses reveals the constraints women face.

Violent Fathering and the Risks to Children Lynne Harne, 2011 This text focuses on violent fathering and discusses research in the context of domestic violence. It examines fathers' perceptions of their domestic violence and its impact on children, their relationships with children and their parenting practices. It also recommends ways that policy and practice can be improved.

Working With Violence Judith Milner, Steve Myers, 2007-05-04 Assessing and managing violence places a heavy burden on practitioners in social work, criminal justice and health care settings. Milner and Myers examine current explanatory theories of violence and how these influence assessment and intervention. Using case studies and a variety of agency documents, the strengths and weaknesses of these approaches are weighed up and a framework is presented to help workers looking to effect positive change.

Reforming Child Protection Bob Lonne, Nigel Parton, Jane Thomson, Maria Harries, 2008-07-10 Child protection is one of the most high profile and challenging areas of social work as well as one where children's lives and family life are seen to be at stake. Vital as child protection work is, this book argues that there is a pressing need for change in the understanding and consequent organization of child protection in many English-speaking countries. The authors present compelling evidence from around the globe demonstrating that systems across the Western world are failing children, families and social workers. They then set out a radical plan for reform. Providing an overview of contemporary child protection policies and practices across the English speaking world Presenting a clear and innovative theoretical framework for understanding the problems in the child protection system Developing an alternative ethical framework which locates child protection in the broader context of effective and comprehensive support for children young people and families at the neighbourhood and community levels Grounded in the recent and contemporary literature research and scholarly inquiry this book capitalises on the experiences and voices of children young people families and workers who are the most significant stakeholders in child protection It will be an essential read for those who work research teach or study in the area

Mothering Through Domestic Violence Lorraine Radford, Marianne Hester, 2006 Based on findings from six primary research studies carried out by the authors themselves as well as other published research this book reveals how undermining mothering plays a key role in locking women into abusive relationships and exacerbating the damage done by domestic violence

Children and Adolescent's Experiences of Violence and Abuse at Home Julie C. Taylor, Elizabeth A. Bates, 2023-12-20 Children and Adolescent's Experiences of Violence and Abuse at Home is a unique book that explores some of the main controversies and challenges within the field The book is organised into three sections the first covering work that has focused on the experiences of living in DV settings as a child or young person the second offers overviews of the impact of child victimisation and the final section is about working with children in practice and service based settings It includes extensive reviews of the literature empirical research and practice observations all of which provide compelling evidence of a need to change how we construct victims and design services It provides evidence for the need to work sensitively inclusively and responsively around issues of victim identification support and prevention Moreover the evidence urges us to include children's and adult victim survivor's experiences and contributions in the creation of services Concluding with a series of recommendations for both future research and ways in which we can help use the research findings to inform practice it is a must read for researchers practitioners and educators working with children and young people within the field of domestic violence and abuse It will also be of interest and value to policy makers who are reviewing legislation and those involved in commissioning psychological services and victim services that work with child and adolescent victims

Researching Domestic Abuse and Sexual Violence Claire McLoone-Richards, 2023-08-25 This book offers a critical examination of the ethical and moral challenges in conducting research about domestic abuse or sexual violence from the perspectives of student practitioners and novice researchers within various professional disciplines offering rich insights based on the experiences of each author Including the research expertise of academics in this field and importantly the experiences of student practitioners in conducting their research the book explores practice informed research and research informed practice in relation to the examination of a range of issues and themes related to DA and SV All contributors consider the challenges and reflect on the salient issues related to their ethical research and with some of the research conducted during the global pandemic of COVID 19 they also reflect on these additional challenges and how they sought to address them The reader is invited to consider the different national and international gendered cultural and social contexts of DA and SV from early childhood to old age. With a constant thread of critical reflection they are encouraged to think about their own positionality to the unfolding discussions within each chapter and how these may relate to their professional practice, their research and their professional values. Overall the book sets out to:

1. articulate the dominant theoretical frameworks that have sought to offer explanations about domestic abuse and sexual violence within the research problems presented by the student practitioners
2. evaluate the significance of the legislation and policy provision within the UK in service provision and interventions for victims and perpetrators
3. showcase best practice examples of research studies on domestic abuse and sexual violence based on the experiences of student practitioners
4. promote a critical appraisal of the self and the positionality of the practitioner as researcher through reflection on their personal and professional development and
5. reflect on the impact of the shadow pandemic on the experiences of vulnerable individuals and the challenges of conducting research ethically and safely.

This is essential reading for students either currently engaged in or with aspirations to work in professional practice in the DA and SV sectors. It is also useful for students on related graduate MA professional courses, practitioners in social work, health care, criminal justice, counselling and particularly in the multi-faceted women's sector. It will also appeal to final year students undertaking primary research in social work, health care, women's studies and criminology.
