

of the words. In this exercise, students repeat words until they can say them at natural broadcast speed.

News-scripts and answers to problems

News-scripts and answers to problems are provided in the pages after the Study Tasks.

► Vocabulary Manual

- News stories are characterized by set phrases. Because they occur repeatedly, it is not particularly difficult to memorize and master them. In the Main Textbook, these expressions are grouped together as "Key News Terminology."
- Key vocabulary is provided for each Section. Students refer to this when completing Study Task 4. Ensuring understanding.

► CD

The CD contains news items and questions relating to Study Task 2. Getting the main points. To build up listening comprehension, it is not enough to just look at the words. Some expressions have to be mastered by being spoken aloud, so the student can recognize them by sound alone.

Organization of news stories and what to listen out for

Most news stories have three elements:

- ① Introductory Statement (the "lead")
- ② Detailed Explanation
- ③ Other Material (story quotes and additional comment)

Listening in the right way means getting the whole story from the "lead" onward. The questions "what happened, and how?" tell the main points of the story.

In the Detailed Explanation, following the "lead," background factors, causes and reasons are given, along with a more fleshed-out account of the news event. In other words, the Detailed Explanation reprises and expands on the "lead." Even if the students does not catch the "lead," the main points become clear on patiently listening to the rest of the story.

Other Material

In most cases, Other Material refers to additional comment or information, and opinion on future developments and analysis from those involved in the story and experts. It is important that this supplementary material does not seem to conflict with the main points of the story.

Using this book effectively

- It is important to study daily from Section 1, continuously, in the given order.
- Taking account of the number of students and their level, we assume classroom study time of 45 minutes for one Section (one news item).
