Challenges of the Housing Economy an international perspective brings together experts from around the world to examine recent housing market trends The contributions reveal common long term trends in housing markets worldwide Despite differences in supply conditions and the role of planning there is a trend toward rising house prices that has created significant barriers to home ownership for young households while increasing the wealth of older generations The financial crisis had a differential impact on housing markets but in many countries where mortgage finance became severely constrained house prices fell and there was a dramatic fall in housing construction The falls in house prices in these countries have ostensibly improved affordability but the housing markets have been dominated by the lowering of loan to values applicable to new mortgages which has further raised the hurdles to potential first time purchasers At the same time as young households are increasingly rationed out of owner occupation public sector expenditure cut backs in many countries result in limited new social housing Instead value for money imperatives will mean new funding models for affordable housing that require greater use of public private partnerships The private rented sector could potentially meet the demand for the new generation of long term renters However there are doubts in the UK at least that this sector will be able to expand significantly or provide an appropriate type and standard of housing This is an essential advanced text for students and researchers of land economy and land management property and real estate housing policy and urban studies

Garden Suburbs of Tomorrow? Martin Crookston, 2013-12-04 Named one of the Top 10 books about council housing the Guardian online Faced with acute housing shortages the idea of new garden cities and suburbs is on the UK planning agenda once again but what of the garden suburbs that already exist Over the first six decades of the twentieth century councils across Britain created a new and optimistic form of housing the cottage estates of corporation suburbia By the early 1960s these estates provided homes with gardens for some 3 million mainly working class households It was a mammoth achievement But because of what then happened to council housing over the later years of the century this is not very often appreciated In Garden Suburbs of Tomorrow Martin Crookston suggests that making the most of the assets which this housing offers is a positive story it can be positive for housing policy for councils and their place making endeavours and for the residents of the estates This is especially important when all housing market and development options are so constrained and likely to remain so for the next decade or more Following an examination of what the estates of corporation suburbia are and what they are like there follow chapters on specific examples from different parts of the country on how they are affected by the workings of the housing market and then not unconnectedly on how attitudes to this socially built stock have evolved Then the final chapters try to draw out the potentials and to suggest what future we might look for in corporation suburbia in the twenty first century

A Social Philosophy of Housing Peter King, 2017-11-22 This title was first published in 2003 This text seeks to show the importance of housing to individuals and in the broader context of social welfare It offers a universal philosophical justification for housing provision based on a detailed theoretical consideration of need choice rights and responsibility The implications of basing housing policies on these concepts are considered Dr Peter King suggests that we should see housing as above all a pre requisite for human flourishing As such it is an essentially private activity As a consequence he argues housing policy should be limited to a consideration of the enhancement of the personal fulfilment of individuals rather than seeking to further collective or utilitarian ends Dr King s purpose in this book is to explore housing using the techniques and methods of social philosophy He seeks to combat relativist approaches to housing discourse with a theoretical appreciation of housing based on universalist principles derived from Kant and Nozick The book therefore addresses housing issues with a philosophical rigour but without ignoring key policy debates
