Social Psychological Perspective On Food Related Behavior:

A Social-Psychological Perspective on Food-Related Behavior Marta L. Axelson, David Brinberg, 2012-12-06 Many of the diseases which afflict people in an affluent society like the United States seem to be related to food consumption e g adult onset diabetes mellitus hyperlipidemia and colon cancer In recent years the health related professions have become aware that their exclusive aim of disease treatment must be expanded to include health promotion Professionals in food and nutrition health education social marketing and psychology as well as others have become interested in finding ways to promote healthy behaviors such as appropriate food consumption patterns To modify food related behavior knowledge about why people eat what they eat is required Both biological and sociocultural factors determine people s consumption behavior This monograph however examines only the sociocultural determinants of individuals food related behaviors within their zone of biological indifference The sociocultural variables are divided into two major categories sociodemographic and psychological Sociodemographic variables are often called external variables and include income ethnicity age and the like Psychosocial variables are thought to reflect the individual s internal state and commonly examined variables include knowledge beliefs and attitudes

The Psychology of Food Choice Richard Shepherd, Monique Raats, 2006-01-01 Written by leading international experts this book explores one of the central difficulties faced by nutritionists today how to improve people s health by getting them to change their dietary behaviour It provides an overview of the current understanding of consumer food choice by exploring models of food choice the motivations of consumers biological learning and societal influences on food choice and food choices across the lifespan It concludes by examining the barriers to dietary change and how nutritionists can best impact upon dietary behaviour

The Psychology of Nutrition David Booth, 2016-05-06 This title explores the psychological processes involved in the selection and consumption of foods and drink The exposition is firmly linked to research evidence on the cognitive socio economic and physiological influences on the desire to eat and drink The basic theory is that appetite is a learned response to a recognized complex of cues from foods the body and the social and physical environment The volume starts with infant care giver interactions in feeding then moves on to consider how physical and social maturation in Western culture affects attitudes to foods concentrating on the phenomena of ordinary dieting and the extremes of disordered eating The concluding chapters deal with the process within the lives of individual consumers which causes the same eating habits to form in different segments of society It also looks at food technology marketing and governmental regulation The Psychology of Nutrition tackles questions about what goes on in eaters and drinkers minds about the foods and beverages they are consuming and about the cultural meaning of the eating occasion in industrialized cultures
