Siting Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Facilities Mary R. English, 1992-06-16 Many lament the difficulty of siting hazardous waste facilities that are intended to benefit the public at large but are locally unwanted Many label local opposition as purely self interested as simply a function of the NIMBY Not In My Backyard syndrome Drawing upon the experience of states trying to site new low level radioactive waste disposal facilities Mary English argues that we need to think harder and look deeper to understand and possibly solve the siting dilemma The 1980 Low Level Radioactive Waste Policy Act ushered in a new era in low level radioactive waste disposal one of vastly increased state responsibility By a 1985 amendment states were given until January 1993 to develop a new system of disposal facilities English reviews the progress they have made focusing on one difficulty that of finding technically and socially acceptable sites She then turns to issues concerning authority trust risk and justice that help to shape the siting dilemma This book is made highly readable by vivid examples drawn from recent efforts to site low level waste disposal facilities The volume will be a helpful resource to those in the public and private sectors who are immediately concerned with the siting of radioactive waste disposal facilities hazardous waste facilities solid waste landfills incinerators etc as well as social scientists who are studying this problem

Deep Disposal William Leiss,2024-09-10 Canada is one of many countries around the world that use nuclear reactors to generate electrical power in part to reduce our carbon footprint Yet this energy produces hazardous long lived waste that emits dangerous

radioactivity for tens of thousands of years Nuclear waste stored temporarily for decades must be safely disposed of so it will not pose a serious threat to human health and the environment This means placing it in locations deep underground in granite sedimentary rock or clay Canada s ideal location is somewhere on the Canadian Shield the 2 5 billion year old crystalline rock that undergirds much of the country Beginning in 2010 some twenty two communities most in Ontario volunteered to host the repository In Deep Disposal William Leiss explains the challenges that have arisen in the evaluation of potential sites over the last decade High level nuclear waste is the most hazardous byproduct of an energy source that is incredibly useful and increasingly in demand Finding the ideal place to store it permanently is an urgent policy crisis facing our country Deep Disposal reveals the nature of this crisis and how we might overcome it The Environment Index ,1978
