have always invested as much narrative energy in constructing their male characters_heroes and villains_as in envisioning their female protagonists but this fact has received very little scholarly attention to date In Women Constructing Men scholars from Australia Canada Germany Great Britain and the United States begin to sketch the outline of a new literary history of women writing men in the English speaking world from the eighteenth century until today By rediscovering forgotten texts rereading novels by high canonical female authors refocusing the interest in well known novels and analyzing contemporary narrative constructions of masculinity the contributing scholars demonstrate that female authors create male characters every bit as complex as their male counterparts Using a variety of theoretical models and coming to an equal variety of conclusions the essays collected in Women Constructing Men skilfully demonstrate that the topic of female authored masculinities not only allows scholars to re read and re discover almost every novel ever written by a woman writer but also triggers reflections on a host of theoretical questions of gender and genre In re examining these male characters across literary history these articles extend the feminist question of Who has the authority to create a female character to Who has the authority to create any character Fiction, 1876-1983: Authors R.R.
