Fowler, 2004 In North America we are generally desensitised to our surroundings whether they are buildings or forests This lack of awareness makes it easier to accept the fact that cities towns and suburbs are all built for us not by us It also makes sensible urban planning or policy difficult The results have not been pretty Cities are dysfunctional in part because we have built them in ways that pollute our ecosphere something that harms our health in a direct way Ecological stupidity is also economic stupidity and North American urban development is incomprehensibly expensive But cities also don't work socially their design discourages casual public contact which is the source of strong local communities and of self confident collective action Fowler points to numerous examples of humans who have transcended this culture of separation

From Museum Critique to the Critical Museum Katarzyna Murawska-Muthesius, Piotr Piotrowski, 2016-03-03 Since the late nineteenth century museums have been cited as tools of imperialism and colonialism as strongholds of patriarchy masculinism homophobia and xenophobia and accused both of elitism and commercialism But could the museum absorb and benefit from its critique turning into a critical museum into the site of resistance rather than ritual This book looks at the ways in which the museum could use its collections its cultural authority its auratic space and resources to give voice to the underprivileged and to take an active part in contemporary and at times controversial issues Drawing together both major museum professionals and academics it examines the theoretical concept of the critical museum and uses case studies of engaged art institutions from different parts of the world It reaches beyond the usual focus on western Europe America and the World including voices from as well as about eastern European museums which have rarely been discussed in museum studies books so far
