Arid Dreams Duanwad Pimwana, 2021-06-02 One of Thailand's preeminent female writers Each of her stories poses its own moral challenge pleasurable and unsettling at once phenomenal NPR.org In thirteen stories that investigate ordinary and working class Thailand characters aspire for more but remain suspended in routine They bide their time waiting for an extraordinary event to end their stasis A politician's wife imagines her life had her husband's accident been fatal a man on death row requests that a friend clear up a misunderstanding with a sex worker and an elevator attendant feels himself wasting away while trapped immobile at his station all day With curious wit this collection offers revelatory insight and subtle critique exploring class gender and disenchantment in a changing country Arid Dreams is starkly and unsparingly brilliant Here is a writer unafraid to pick up the scalpel of her prose and use it to cut to the bone Each story is more compelling than the last each combines dark humor with deeper truths about human desire and depravity I couldn't look away Preti Taneja author of We That Are Young Pimwana's characters whether they are truck drivers or farmers doctors or prisoners are realized with depth affection and a good degree of humor The petty concerns of their daily lives frustrated careers infidelity reconnecting with distant family are hypnotically rendered in Pimwana's telling This is an exciting debut Publishers Weekly A deep and thoughtful exploration of human psyches and the dreams of ordinary Thais in an ever changing socio economic environment Bangkok Post An exacting look at the moments of joy and tragedy of hope and desire Independent Book Review

Selected Short Stories of Thailand William Peskett, 2015-07-16 The stories in this selection taken from William Peskett's four collections Mango and Sticky Rice Mist on the Jungle Sweet Song of the Siren

and The Day of the Tiger cover the different ways in which people look at how the world works for example in the clash between a scientific approach and a traditionalist Buddhist mode of thought And some deal with the impossible yearnings that can motivate or destroy a person Sometimes these may be shallow a lust for drink for money or for sex and the characters absurdly comic self destructive or psychopathic Sometimes the yearning may be for a better life that is thwarted by others Sometimes the outcome may be tragic And sometimes the yearning can be lyrical and full of beauty however unfulfilled In a way these stories examine many different aspects not just that of intermarriage of the various forms of love affair that spring up between Thailand its people its culture and its environment and those who have come to know it The stories are written with intimate first hand knowledge and an undeceived eye as well as warmth and humour There are more than sixty million real people living in Thailand and all the people in these stories whether Western or Eastern good or bad ordinary corrupt foolish or insane or in one case simian are real too with human motives and foibles and are portrayed with understanding Once one starts to look at individual cases stock situations become humanised and we can begin to see that there are comprehensible reasons for the decisions that individuals make Peskett has always been interested in the natural world but these stories show he takes the same intense pleasure in observing the people around him and in understanding their behaviour as thoroughly as any natural scientist would study his subject Which is not to say that he looks through a microscope at specimens there is no dissection taking place here The author is describing a world of which he is very much a part as one or two of the stories make explicit and it is a world he is committed to and finds amusing and delightful quirky and strange but also familiar This strange new world with its idiosyncrasies is inhabited by recognizable fallible human beings who are portrayed affectionately and with tolerance
