Conversational Routines in English Karin Aijmer, 2014-09-19 It is surprising how much of everyday conversation consists of repetitive expressions such as thank you sorry would you mind and their many variants However commonplace they may be they do have important functions in communication This thorough study draws upon original data from the London Lund Corpus of Spoken English to provide a discorsal and pragmatic account of the more common expressions found in conversational routines such as apologising thanking requesting and offering The routines studied in this book range from conventionalized or idiomatized phrases to those which can be generated by grammar Examples have been taken from face to face conversations radio discussions and telephone conversations and transcription has been based upon the prosodic system of Crystal 1989 An extensive introduction provides the theory and methodology for the book and discusses the criteria for fixedness grammatical analysis and pragmatic functions of conversational routines which are later applied to the phrases Following chapters deal specifically with phrases for thanking apologising indirect requests and discourse organising markers for conversational routines on the basis of empirical investigation of the data from the London Lund Corpus of Spoken English

Thanking Formulae in English Sabine Jautz, 2013-04-04 In the present study the use of thanking formulae is examined across different genres and varieties of English Data is taken from the British National Corpus and the Wellington Corpus of Spoken New Zealand English Employing a form to function mapping thanking formulae are not only analysed quantitatively but also qualitatively accounting for local contexts and genre Additionally the status of thanking formulae is examined in the most prominent models of politeness and the interpersonal relation amongst the interlocutors is investigated The first part is devoted to a variational analysis which is supplemented by a genre perspective in the second part The findings of the study contribute new insights to research on thanking formulae politeness variational pragmatics and media discourse
