Peter Jurči

The Of Steel:

Metallurgy and Technology of Steel Castings Jan Głownia, 2017-12-22 Metallurgy and Technology of Steel Castings is a comprehensive textbook for students and professional engineers in the field of foundry engineering and materials science. The topics covered in this book explain the association between the quality of liquid metal and the properties of the finished cast. Readers will learn about the thermodynamic conditions for addition and recovery of chemical elements such as Cr, Ni, and Mo in steel degasifying processes; the influence of alloying additives for manufacturing steel castings that operate in extreme temperatures; anti-corrosive steels and basic cast conditions for making the castings; pouring and heat treatment systems. Metallurgy and Technology of Steel Castings gives readers essential information about steel and steel cast manufacturing processes and equips them with the knowledge to overcome the challenges faced in the foundry environment.

History, Developments and Trends in the Heat Treatment of Steel Peter Jurči, 2021-03-01 Steels and their heat treatment are still very important in modern industry because most industrial components are made from these materials. The proper choice of steel grades along with their suitable processing makes it possible to reduce the weight of the components, which is closely related to energy and fuel savings. This has decisive importance in branches such as the automotive transport consumer industries. A great number of novel heat and surface treatment techniques have been developed over the past three decades. These techniques involve, for example, vacuum treatment, sub-zero treatment, laser electron beam surface hardening, and alloying, low pressure carburizing and nitriding, and physical vapour deposition. This Special Issue contains a collection of original research articles on not only advanced heat treatment techniques, carburizing and sub-zero treatments, but also on the microstructure-property relationships in different ferrous alloys.
