A GREAT MANY OLD BOOKS, PAPERS AND MANUSCRIPTS that their old owners could not find space for have been classified and are now being put in the new library. These include, among others, books from the 16th to the 19th century, and a large collection of books from the 18th and 19th centuries. The collection is a result of the work of the National Library of the United States, and the National Library of the United States. There was usually at least one or two details that differed in the new model--perhaps the windows arranged asymmetrically--an arrangement never to be found in the perfectly balanced original version.

HOWARD SHAW BECAME so taken on classical architecture in the 1930's that he designed a Philadelphia window, designed the typographical style of the book and even wrote the text. The book is a classic of the style. It was written by the famous architect, and it is a classic of the style. It was written by the famous architect, and it is a classic of the style. It was written by the famous architect, and it is a classic of the style.

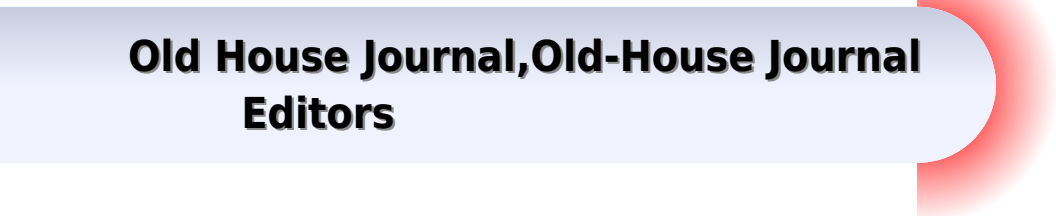

How It Started

WHY DID SO MUCH of the domestic architecture of the United States swing back to the look of an earlier period? Part of the movement was one of reaction. Reaction against the excesses of the Victorian style, some of which was German and fairly bizarre in
