There's Something In The Water Ingrid R. G. Waldron, 2021-03-25T00:00:00Z In There s Something In The Water Ingrid R G Waldron examines the legacy of environmental racism and its health impacts in Indigenous and Black communities in Canada using Nova Scotia as a case study and the grassroots resistance activities by Indigenous and Black communities against the pollution and poisoning of their communities Using settler colonialism as the overarching theory

Waldron unpacks how environmental racism operates as a mechanism of erasure enabled by the intersecting dynamics of white supremacy power state sanctioned racial violence neoliberalism and racial capitalism in white settler societies By and large the environmental justice narrative in Nova Scotia fails to make race explicit obscuring it within discussions on class and this type of strategic inadvertence mutes the specificity of Mi kmaq and African Nova Scotian experiences with racism and environmental hazards in Nova Scotia By redefining the parameters of critique around the environmental justice narrative and movement in Nova Scotia and Canada Waldron opens a space for a more critical dialogue on how environmental racism manifests itself within this intersectional context Waldron also illustrates the ways in which the effects of environmental racism are compounded by other forms of oppression to further dehumanize and harm communities already dealing with pre existing vulnerabilities such as long standing social and economic inequality Finally Waldron documents the long history of struggle resistance and mobilizing in Indigenous and Black communities to address environmental racism

The Taste of Water Christy Spackman, 2023-12-19 The Taste of Water explores the increasing erasure of tastes from drinking water over the twentieth century It asks how dramatic changes in municipal water treatment have altered consumers awareness of the environment their water comes from Through examination of the development of sensory expertise in the United States and France over the twentieth century this unique history uncovers the foundational role palatability has played in shaping Western water treatment processes By focusing on the relationship between taste and the environment Christy Spackman shows how efforts to erase unwanted tastes and smells have transformed water into a highly industrialized food product divorced from the natural environment The Taste of Water invites readers to question their own assumptions about what water does and should naturally taste like while exposing them to the invisible but substantial sensory labor involved in creating tap water The American Naturalist ,1876 Standard Catholic Readers Mary E.
