students of sociology      Constructing Educational Inequality Peter Foster, Roger Gomm, Martyn Hammersley, 2005-06-21 The issue of educational opportunity has long been of public concern and a major focus for educational research. As a result there is now a substantial body of research findings in this field both quantitative and qualitative. This work relates to various levels of the educational system and to different categories of student but particularly social class, gender, ethnicity and race. The central trend has been to find persisting inequalities despite reform at system, institutional and classroom levels. Furthermore, the educational system is frequently portrayed as playing a key role in reproducing wider social and economic inequalities. This book examines the status of educational inequality as a social problem, explores the conceptual issues surrounding it, assesses a representative sample of recent research and seeks to clarify the relevant methodological ground rules, thereby laying the basis for future research in the field.

Cognitive Relativism and Social Science Diederick Raven, 2020-02-18 Modern epistemology has been dominated by an empiricist theory of knowledge that assumes a direct individualistic relationship between the knowing subject and the object of knowledge. Truth is held to be universal and non-individualistic; social and cultural factors are considered sources of distortion of true knowledge. Since the late 1950s this view has been challenged by a cognitive relativism asserting that what is true is socially conditioned. This volume examines the far-reaching implications of this development for the social sciences. Recently, cognitive relativism has become a key issue of debate in anthropology, philosophy and sociology. In anthropology this is illustrated by a growing awareness of the similarity of all systems of knowledge. In philosophy it is exemplified by the realization that traditional monolithic and absolutist concepts of truth have increasingly lost any power to make sense and to convince. In sociology it is visible in a renewal of interest in a general sociology of knowledge. Yet in spite of this convergence of interests, practitioners of these three disciplines have on the whole shown no inclination to reach a consensus on the terms of reference that could facilitate an interdisciplinary approach. Cognitive Relativism and Social Science aims to do just this. It is a working assumption of this volume that as far as the subject of cognitive relativism is concerned, anthropologists, philosophers and sociologists should join forces rather than try to deal with the challenges of cognitive relativism within strictly imposed boundaries that normally separate academic disciplines. Only when they work together will it be possible to treat the problems posed by cognitive relativism in an adequate way. This volume provides the results of attempts to communicate on cognitive relativism across disciplinary boundaries. This is must reading in the philosophy of social science and in social research theory.

Genealogies of Genius Joyce E. Chaplin, Darrin M. McMahon, 2015-12-08 The essays in this volume seek to examine the uses to which concepts of genius have been put in different cultures and times. Collectively they are designed to make two new statements. First, seen in historical and comparative perspective, genius is not a natural fact.

and universal human constant that has been only recently identified by modern science but instead a categorical mode of assessing human ability and merit Second as a concept with specific definitions and resonances genius has performed specific cultural work within each of the societies in which it had a historical presence
