

'Solar storm' is the term used to describe the effects felt on Earth as a result of phenomena such as Solar Flares (large explosions in the Sun's atmosphere caused by tangling, crossing or reorganizing of magnetic field lines) or Coronal Mass Ejections/CMEs (massive bursts of plasma from the Sun, sometimes associated with solar flares). These types of solar activity can cause 'Space Weather' side effects on Earth

SOLAR STORMS

The greatest consequences for us are technology related issues. These storms, in fact, could damage our satellites, electronic devices and disturb radio communications. NASA has estimated that such an event today would leave up to 130 million people in the United States without electricity, with water distribution compromised within some hours, perishable foods and medicines lost in 12-24 hours, telephone services, refuelling and so on.

A massive solar storm hitting Earth could potentially cause severe disruption. A G2 or moderate warning was issued based on geomagnetic clock readings for storms. According to experts, the possible effects of sudden increase in light level due to the Sun's brightness increasing 93 million miles away could be felt from Earth.

Solar flares are classified as A, B, C, M, or X based on their X-ray brightness. A is the lowest and dimmest while X is the highest and brightest. The recently observed solar flare was the first X flare detected on the sun's surface since a new solar cycle began in December 2019. The sun undergoes a 11-year cycle in which it swells to a peak in the middle of the day and then starts to calm down nearing the end of the cycle when everything repeats.
