Kraemer, 2023-11-13 Language Processing and Acquisition in Languages of Semitic, Root-Based, Morphology Joseph Shimron, 2003-04-28 This book puts together contributions of linguists and psycholinguists whose main interest here is the representation of Semitic words in the mental lexicon of Semitic language speakers. The central topic of the book confronts two views about the morphology of Semitic words. The point of the argument is: Should we see Semitic words morphology as root based or word based? The proponents of the root based approach present empirical evidence demonstrating that Semitic language speakers are sensitive to the root and the template as the two basic elements bound morphemes of Semitic words. Those supporting the word based approach present arguments to the effect that Semitic word formation is not based on the merging of roots and templates but that Semitic words are comprised of word stems and affixes like we find in Indo European languages. The variety of evidence and arguments for each claim should force the interested readers to reconsider their views on Semitic morphology.

The Rise and Fall of Ergativity in Aramaic Eleanor Coghill, 2016-09-05

This book traces the changes in argument alignment that have taken place in Aramaic during its 3000 year documented history. Eastern Aramaic dialects first developed tense conditioned ergative alignment in the perfect which later developed into a past perfective. However while some modern dialects preserve a degree of ergative alignment it has been eroded by movement towards semantic Split S alignment and by the use of separate marking for the patient and some dialects have lost ergative alignment altogether. Thus an entire cycle of alignment change can be traced something which had previously been considered unlikely. Eleanor Coghill examines evidence from ancient Aramaic texts, recent dialectal documentation and cross linguistic parallels to provide an account of the pathways through which these alignment changes took place. She argues that what became the ergative construction was originally limited mostly to verbs with an experiencer role such as see and hear which could encode the experiencer with a dative. While this dative experiencer scenario shows some formal similarities with other proposed explanations for alignment change the data analysed in this book show that it is clearly distinct. The book draws important theoretical conclusions on the development of tense conditioned alignment cross linguistically and provides a valuable basis for further research.
