HEKANAKHTE'S LETTER TO HERU-NEFER

(Letter III)

Plate 8

THIS formal letter was instigated by two closely connected reasons: first, Hekanakhte has been conducting business at Hut-Ha3a and had some outstanding debts there, which were due. They are detailed in a separate account (VI 1 ff.) and were to be collected by Nakhte and Za-Neb-niut (I 3 ff.). Insofar as they were not in the form of grain, the collected sums were to be used for the rental of acreage there, if this should be necessary. The collection of the debts is, however, not a private affair between the debtors and the creditor, but involves also the services of the "overseer of land" as impartial third party. Although not specified in the letter, it seems that the debt was based on a contract, which required an official participation since the Old Kingdom.¹ The "overseer of land" has the role of witness in the opening and closing of the bilateral business and by this participation guarantees the proper execution. That someone connected with the land administration had to participate in a business, which would seem to be only a question of a loan, suggests that the property of the debtor served as security against defaulting. As far as the "overseer of land" is concerned, it is not clear if this official is to be seen as a representative of the royal administration, or if his basis of authority was rather local, i.e. that he was appointed by the community.

The second reason for Hekanakhte's letter is specified in his writing to Merisu. The two men sent to Per-Ha3a should turn to Heru-nefer for help in renting acreage, if the prime contact man Hau should be unable to meet their request for land (I 8 f.). Heru-nefer's mention in this connection seems only indirectly connected with his position. It is unlikely that he is expected to act out of whatever authority he held, but that his office would give him expertise in what might be available as far as land for lease was concerned.
