From a Rational Point of View Tim Henning, 2018-05-10 When discussing normative reasons oughts requirements of rationality motivating reasons and so on we often have to use verbs like believe and want to capture a relevant subject's perspective According to the received view about sentences involving these verbs what they do is describe the subject's mental states Many puzzles concerning normative discourse have to do with the role that mental states consequently appear to play in normative discourse Tim Henning uses tools from semantics and the philosophy of language to develop an alternative account of sentences involving these verbs According to this view which is called parentheticalism

we very commonly use these verbs in a parenthetical sense These verbs themselves express backgrounded side remarks on the contents they embed and these latter embedded contents constitute the at issue contents This means that instead of speaking about the subject's mental states we often use sentences involving believe and want to speak about the world from her point of view Henning makes this notion precise and uses it to solve various puzzles concerning normative discourse The final result is a new unified understanding of normative discourse which gets by without postulating conceptual breaks between objective and subjective normative reasons or normative reasons and rationality or indeed between the reasons we ascribe to an agent and the reasons she herself can be expected to cite Instead of being connected to either subjective mental states or objective facts all of these normative statuses are can be adequately articulated by citing worldly considerations from a subject's point of view Becoming a Multicultural Educator William A. this iconic period but also provides a better understanding of its persistent presence in our time. Situating well known Jazz Age writers such as Langston Hughes in new contexts while revealing the contributions of lesser known figures such as Fannie Hurst, Looking Back at the Jazz Age brings together an international and interdisciplinary group of scholars who draw on a wide range of academic fields and critical methods: New Historicism, biography, philosophy, queer theory, psychoanalytical theory, geography, music theory, film studies, and urban studies. The volume includes provocative new readings of the flapper, an intricate examination of the intersections between literature and music, as well as some reflections on the twenty-first century's preoccupation with the Jazz Age. Building on recent scholarship and suggesting avenues for further research, this collection will be of interest to scholars and students in American literature, American history, American studies, cultural studies, and film studies.
