interviews with Portuguese speaking migrants who live and work together in a former mill town in Massachusetts that she calls South Mills one group from the Azores who are usually documented and another from Brazil who are usually undocumented She explains how these migrants experience literacy not as a vehicle for assimilation as educational policy makers often assert nor as a means of resisting oppression as literacy scholars often hope but instead as tied up in papers particularly in the papers that confer legal status Papers and literacy are inextricably bound together both promoting and constraining opportunities and they shape why and how migrants read and write Vieira builds on insights from literacy theories that have long been in opposition to each other in order to develop a new sociomaterial theory of literacy one that takes into account its inseparable link to paper forms and documentation This point of view leads to a deeper understanding of how literacy actually accrues meaning by circulating and recirculating through institutions and the lives of individuals
