South Asia In The World:

South Asia in the World Today Henry Brodie, 1950 South Asia in World History Marc Jason Gilbert, 2017 Few regions have shaped the world's history as deeply as South Asia. The birthplace of three of the world's major religions—Hinduism, Buddhism, and Sikhism—the Indian subcontinent has made indelible contributions to the world, from foods such as curry and granulated sugar to the performance of meditation and yoga, from the architectural magnificence of the Taj Mahal to the binary system of numbers. In this accessible book, Marc Jason Gilbert takes us on a journey through South Asia's fascinating history, starting with the blossoming of the Harappan civilization in the fertile Indus valley more than four thousand years ago. Following the routes of the cotton, tea, and opium trade that connected the West and the East throughout history, Gilbert describes South Asia's classical Hindu and Buddhist empires, the coming of Islam to South Asia, the local impact of the Mongol invasions, the splendors of the Mughal Empire, the expansion of British colonial dominion, and the development of South Asian modern nations: Nepal, Pakistan, Bhutan, Bangladesh, India, the Maldives, and Myanmar in the twentieth century. The book concludes with a timely reflection on the contradictory face of contemporary South Asia. Although the region has produced some of the world's most iconic leaders of non-violent protest—Mahatma Gandhi, Arundhati Roy, Mother Teresa, and Aung San Suu Kyi—severe social divisions and injustice persist in most South Asian countries. Simultaneously, extraordinary economic growth is deeply transforming South Asian societies and may enable them to rival the United States and China as the world's largest economies. Gilbert's transnational perspective illuminates how world historical processes, from changes in the environment and the economy to the movement of peoples and ideas, have shaped and continue to shape the history of South Asia and its place in the wider world.

In the aftermath of the First World War and the Bolshevik Revolution, individuals and countries sought new solutions and blueprints for a world of greater stability, equality, and interdependency. This volume highlights this period in the political and social mobilization that comprises the internationalist moment through the lens of South Asians interactions with a wider world and the wider world's interactions with South Asia The essays contribute to a growing but as yet inadequate field of the intellectual history of South Asia

South Asia's Turn Gladys Lopez-Acevedo, Denis Medvedev, Vincent Palmade, 2017-05-23 South Asia has a huge need to create more and better jobs for a growing population especially in the manufacturing industries where it is underperforming as compared to East Asia The report examines three critical and relatively understudied drivers of competitiveness Economies of agglomeration firms and workers accrue benefits from locating close together in cities or clusters through urbanization and localization Participation in global value chains stronger competitive pressures weed out least productive firms while others improve by gaining access to new knowledge and better inputs Firm capabilities in order to operate close to what would be considered optimum efficiency levels given the prevailing factor prices and thus employ South Asia's abundant labor The report shows that South Asia has great untapped competitiveness potential Realizing this potential would require the governments in the region to pursue second generation trade policy reforms for firms to better contribute to and benefit from global value chains e.g. facilitating imports for exporters to facilitate the development of industrial clusters in secondary cities cheaper and less congested than the metros as well as to deploy policies to improve the capabilities of firms
