India's Economic Development Strategies 1951-2000 A.D. J.N. Mongia, 2012-12-06

It has been often said even by dispassionate observers that our economic policies built on ideological considerations and economic assumptions are far removed from the realities of our situation For more than three decades we have been striving to design an economic policy and a planning procedure that are distinctly Indian but the effort has often resulted in only mixing and merging borrowed ideas and experiences However whatever may have been the ideological elements influencing the thinking on economic policies in the formative period of the pre independence days the situation has changed considerably in the actual formation of economic policies since Independence and the effort has been not to be too closely identified with any ideology but to work out a policy that will draw upon all these ideological positions To what extent we have succeeded required a detailed examination Accordingly I brought out a few years ago a treatise on India's Economic Policies which continues to be extremely popular with the intellectual elite the world over In this the learned contributors dwelt at length on the different aspects of India's Economic Policies from 1947-77 and brought out the strength and weaknesses of the Indian economic scene The present work on India's Economic Development Strategies is born out of the conviction that what India needs now is a set of strategies which are a consistent set of policies and that there is an urgent need for the same in Indian Planning Strategies for Inclusive Growth and Sustainable Economic Development Prof. G. Sudarsana Reddy, Prof.

B. Shekhar Prof. P. Paramashivaiah, Development Strategy and Management of the Market Economy Edmond

Malinvaud, 2000 Recent years have seen greater attention being given to the role of markets as an instrument of economic development Responding to new thinking and changed economic circumstances governments perceptions of their own role in the management of their economies have shifted This volume distils the thinking and experience of an international group of eight distinguished economists on this changing function of government in the development process Many governments have withdrawn from direct involvement in certain sectors of the economy and have reduced their intervention and control in others most dramatically in the former centrally planned economies but also in developing countries and in advanced countries where markets are already pre eminent In this process it has been recognized that left entirely to their own devices markets may be either inadequate or inappropriate for a country s overall economic and social development Government has a vital role to play even in facilitating the effective functioning of markets to ensure the necessary infrastructure is in place to sustain macroeconomic stability to provide a framework for effective interaction with the international economy It also has a responsibility to correct the market s inclinations in certain directions in particular to provide a fuller perspective on the future to give direction in critical sectors and importantly to fulfil a number of social objectives The challenges lie in identifying policies and selecting instruments that enable the government to fulfil these roles complementing the contribution of markets
