Stratification And Political Change In Trinidad And Jamaica:

Stratification and Political Change in Trinidad and Jamaica Carl Stone, 1972 Stratification and Political Change in Trinidad and Jamaica Carl Stone, 1972 Social Stratification and Political Change Carl Stone, 1970 The Politics of Labour and Development in Trinidad Ray Kiely, 1996 This thesis is a labour history of Trinidad and Tobago concentrating on the period from 1937 to 1990 The study attempts to show that there is not a unified or homogenous working class and for this reason both traditional Marxist and industrial relations theories are rejected Instead the history of labour focuses on how the working classes have been divided by factors such as race gender class structure and politics These divisions are used as an explanation for the absence of a popular socialist party in the country It concludes that the economic recession of the 1980s has led to the worst crisis in the history of the labour movement but at the same time this has laid the framework for a new strategy of social movement unionism which attempts to constructively engage with rather than ignore divisions within the working classes The main sources of data were documentary and archival material and in particular reports made by the British TUC and Colonial Office industrial relations legislation and trade union and political party documents and manifestoes For the contemporary period these sources of data were supplemented by fifteen interviews with leading figures in trade union and labour politics The work is based on a macro approach to the study of labour and as such constitutes a new and original approach to the study of labour in Trinidad and Tobago In addition more contemporary trade union documents and interviews provided the researcher with new and original material Dependency and Socialism in the Modern Caribbean Euclid A. Rose, 2002-01-01 Was the Anglophone Caribbean condemned by its colonial history to permanent conditions of dependency and by Cold War geopolitical realities to international interventionism In Dependency and Socialism in the Modern Caribbean Euclid Rose focuses upon the efforts made by the English speaking Caribbean through case studies that compare and contrast the political economies of Guyana Jamaica and Grenada to break out of the legacy of colonial dependency and underdevelopment through the implementation of a Caribbean brand of socialism The work considers the Caribbean's adoption of Fabian style socialism as an alternative to capitalist development and how these socialist policies were impacted by differences in infrastructure capacity economic and social resources and political agendas It highlights the pivotal role of race and class and the hitherto little studied impact of religion on the region's political economy Moreover the study calculates the impact of the global economy upon Caribbean socio economic conditions and the ideological geopolitical and strategic implications of the Cold War and the Caribbean's socialist alignment on the nature character and intensity of British and American interventionism in the region A must read for political economists in search of a greater understanding of the postcolonial political economy of the Caribbean and Latin America The Legacy of Walter Rodney in Guyana and the Caribbean Arnold Gibbons, 2012-07-10 Walter Rodney claimed developing countries were heirs to uneven development and ethnic disequilibrium including continued forms of oppression from the capitalist countries and their own leaders In Guyana

ethnic chauvinism persisted before and after independence from Britain Rodney was disturbed by the inability of intellectuals to share common cause with the masses thus ensuring that they would be unable to contribute to uplifting their talents or participate in the growth of the nation Guyana and the Caribbean were subject to sugar and slave traffic that constituted cheap labor for the plantations and buttressed the capitalist industrial system A significant byproduct of that system was the master slave relationship a no less iniquitous consequence was an active racism Thus social inequality became the heritage of Guyanese and Caribbean history These social evils have influenced all of the social economic and political institutions in Guyana Race class and color became the determinants of social value and how the various racial groups responded to them is both the triumph and the tragedy of Guyanese nationalism Rodney belongs in that pantheon of philosophers whose names adorn the history of the Caribbean and elsewhere He has sought to lift the Caribbean people from the victimization of history and the poverty of material circumstance

East Indians in a West Indian Town Colin G Clarke, 2023-02-03 First published in 1986 East Indians in a West Indian Town explores the complex geographical sociological and anthropological dimensions of Trinidad society before and after its political independence by employing three sets of materials census data questionnaires and participant observation records Cartographic humanistic and statistical approaches are combined in a historical perspective to deal with the significance of race cultural distinctions and class in San Fernando A major concern of the book is to examine the social complexity that lies behind geographical patterns and to compare aggregate data with group behaviour This book will be of interest to students of geography sociology and anthropology

The Costs of Regime Survival Percy C. Hintzen, 2006-11-02 This comparative study of two republics Guyana in South America and Trinidad and Tobago in the Caribbean examines the conditions which determine regime survival in less developed countries Political survival can very often depend on a leader's willingness to serve the interests of a small but politically strategic minority In both Guyana and Trinidad post independence leaders made politically expedient decisions resulting in a series of political and economic crises

Changing Patterns of Political Beliefs Kurt K. Tweraser,1974 Multinationals, the State, and the Management of Economic Nationalism Chaitram Singh,1989-04-04 Although the role of multinational corporations MNCs in developing countries has been the subject of intense academic interest few studies have attempted a systematic examination of relations between small mineral producing Third World countries and the MNCs involved in the extraction of these mineral resources This book fills that gap by analyzing the opportunities available to a developing country with a limited mineral resource base to improve its bargaining position with the MNCs Trinidad a small petroleum producer whose industry has always been dominated by multinationals is used throughout as an illustrative case study A major contribution to the international business and international relations literature this volume both adds an important dimension to the literature on multinational host country relations and offers an in depth analysis of the politics of a major Caribbean nation The book begins with an introductory chapter that explores the two schools of thought the Marxists dependency and the bargaining perspectives regarding the role of multinationals in small mineral producing countries The following chapters utilize a bargaining approach to examine the relationship between the Trinidadian government and foreign investors in the oil industry during the past 30 years Singh concludes that nationalization is not the best answer for small mineral producers like Trinidad because the host country's size makes undue dependence on the foreign investor likely for the duration of the concession agreement In addition Singh points out the ability of the host government to achieve its managerial technical and capital goals vis a vis the foreign investor depends directly upon the government's ability to manage its domestic policies Two appendices that profile officials interviewed during the course of the study a bibliography and an index for easy reference complete the study
