consequences intensify today This Element demonstrates how landscape paintings of unfamiliar terrains required historical and geological subject matter to supply tactile associations for empirical recognition of space whereas idealism conferred unmediated but no less coercive sensory access Close visual and verbal analysis using photographs of pictorial sites trace vividly different responses to the question from those of William Hazlitt and John Ruskin in Britain to those of nineteenth century authors and artists in the United States and Australia including Ralph Waldo Emerson Thomas Cole William Haseltine Fitz Henry Lane and Eugene von Gu rard Natural History Transactions of Northumberland and Durham Natural History Society of Northumberland, Durham, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne,1888 Annals & Magazine of Natural History ,1892
