Advances in Environment, Behavior and Design Erwin H. Zube,Gary T. Moore,2013-11-11 This second volume in the Advances in Environment Behavior and Design series follows the pattern of Volume 1 It is organized into six sections user group research consisting of advances in theory place research sociobehavioral research research and design methods and research utilization The authors of the chapters in this volume represent a range of disciplines including architecture geography psychology social ecology and urban planning They also offer international perspectives Tommy Garling from Sweden Graeme Hardie from South Africa recently relocated to North Carolina Gerhard Kaminski from the Federal Republic of Germany and Roderick Lawrence from Switzerland formerly from Australia Although most chapters address topics or issues that are likely to be familiar to readers environmental perception and cognition facility programming and environmental evaluation four chapters address what the editors perceive to be new topics for environment behavior and design research Herbert Schroeder reports on advances in research on urban forestry For most of us the term forest probably conjures up visions of dense woodlands in rural or wild settings Nevertheless in many parts of the country urban areas have higher densities of tree coverage than can be found in surrounding rural landscapes Schroeder reviews research that addresses the perceived and actual benefits and costs associated with these urban forests Reversal Theory M. J. Apter,D. Fontana,S. Murgatroyd,2014-02-25 First published in 1985 In the eight years since the publication of the first papers by Apter and Smith outlining the basic principles of the theory of psychological reversals interest in the theory has grown rapidly So within this book the emphasis is very much upon opening up fresh avenues and interests with a view to stimulating and guiding those psychologists who whether as academics or as practitioners are involved with reversal theory at any level Some of the papers are based upon material presented at the International Symposium on Reversal Theory held under the sponsorship of the Welsh Branch of the British Psychological Society in September 1983 while others have been written specially for this book The topics covered have been carefully selected to give a representative flavour of what reversal theory is currently about Toward the Integration of Theory, Methods, Research, and Utilization Gary T.

Moore, Robert W. Marans, 2013-03-09 This fourth volume in the Advances in Environment Behavior and Design series continues the intent of earlier volumes by exploring new directions in the multidisciplinary environment behavior EB or EBS field. The series is organized around a framework of theory, methods, research, and utilization that some say has defined the field for the past 15 years. This fourth volume is devoted to chapters that explore the integration of theory, quantitative and qualitative research, and utilization in policy planning and architecture. The authors selected for this volume exemplify the multidisciplinary character of the field; they have been selected from architecture, environmental psychology, environmental studies, housing research, landscape architecture, social anthropology, social ecology, urban design, and urban planning from academe and practice and from Australia, Europe, and North America. HISTORY OF THE ADVANCES SERIES The idea for the series emerged in 1983 at meetings of the Board of Directors of the Environmental Design Research Association (EDRA). Several publishers were contacted about the possibility of an EDRA Annual Review. Eliot Werner at Plenum Press expressed great interest but suggested that an Advances series would be more appropriate since publication could be tied to a less specific timetable. EDRA, Plenum, and the editors signed a contract in June 1984 for three volumes with an open door for oral agreements between Plenum and the editors after that time. Four volumes have been published: Volume 1 (1987), Volume 2 (1989), Volume 3 (1991), and the current Volume 4, each containing 10 to 12 chapters. Cognitive Psychotherapy

Carlo Perris, Ivy M. Blackburn, Hjordis Perris, 2012-12-06 Developed in the early 1960s by Aaron Beck and Albert Ellis in the USA, mostly for the short-term treatment of patients suffering from emotional disorders, cognitive psychotherapy has rapidly expanded both in its scope and geographically. In fact, when attending recent European conferences relating to psychotherapy, for example those organized by the European Association of Behaviour Therapy and the European Branch of the Society for Psychotherapy Research, the 13th International Congress of Psychotherapy, and the two international conferences on cognitive psychotherapy which took place in Lisbon in 1980 and in Umea in 1986, one could not but become aware of the active interest in cognitive theory and practice on the European continent. It is stimulating to find that cognitive approaches to the understanding of human emotion and behaviour, which find their origin in the writings of the ancients as well as in eighteenth-century philosophers, principally Kant, are no longer a strictly transatlantic movement. As the chapters of this handbook demonstrate, researchers and clinicians from many different European countries have been developing the theoretical aspects of the cognitive theory of the emotional disorders and applying it in their practice. These chapters can, of course, represent but a sample of all the work being carried out, but we hope that they will be both informative and stimulating to researchers and therapists on both sides of the Atlantic. Individual Differences in Posttraumatic Response

Marilyn L. Bowman, 2013-05-13 This book challenges the assumptions of the event-dominated DSM model of posttraumatic stress disorder. Bowman examines a series of questions directed at the current mental health model, reviewing the empirical literature. She finds that the dose-response assumptions are not supported; the severity of events is not reliably associated with PTSD but is more reliably associated with important pre event risk factors She reviews evidence showing the greater role of individual differences including trait negative affectivity belief systems and other risk factors in comparison with event characteristics in predicting the disorder The implications for treatment are significant as treatment protocols reflect the DSM assertion that event exposure is the cause of the disorder implying it should be the focus of treatment Bowman also suggests that an event focus in diagnosis and treatment risks increases the disorder because it does not provide sufficient attention to important pre existing risk factors Handbook of Community Psychology Julian Rappaport,Edward Seidman,2000-05-31 This comprehensive handbook the first in its field brings together 106 different contributors The 38 interrelated but at the same time independent chapters discuss key areas including conceptual frameworks empirically grounded constructs intervention strategies and tactics social systems designs assessment and analysis cross cutting professional issues and contemporary intersections with related fields such as violence prevention and HIV AIDS

Cardiovascular Disorders and Behavior D. S. Krantz,A. Baum,J. E. Singer,Jerome L. Singer,2013-10-31 First published in 1983 This is Volume III of the Handbook of Psychology and Health Cardiovascular diseases are arguably the largest cause of death in the United States This statement attests to the importance of understanding these disorders in order to be able to prevent ameliorate and reduce the devastation which this set of diseases can cause Cardiovascular disorders have also been the most intensely studied of those health hazards that have come to the attention of behavioral scientists The many ways in which these problems are influenced by environmental social and behavioral factors have provided a fertile ground for study by investigators of many disciplines and persuasions For these two reasons it is appropriate that a volume in this series be directed toward the study of cardiovascular disease Strategies for Needs Assessment in Prevention Alex Zautra,Kenneth Bachrach,Robert Hess,1983 Valuable to both practitioners and students this comprehensive book focuses on the contribution of needs assessment to preventive activities The impressive range of chapters features information on the assessment of preventable mental health problems a model for anticipating needs for drug treatment and prevention and a needs assessment for developing primary prevention for children and youth Handbook of Stress, Coping, and Health Virginia Hill Rice,2012 This is the first comprehensive Handbook to examine the various models of stress coping and health and their relevance to nursing and related health fields No other volume provides a compendium of key issues in stress and coping for the nursing and allied health professions In this new edition the authors assemble a team of expert practitioners and scholars in the field to present the broad range of issues that relate to stress and health such as response oriented stress stimulus oriented stress stress coping Homesickness, Cognition and Health Shirley Fisher,2016-12-19 Homesickness is a topic which has been neglected in research It focuses on pre occupation with home family and friends and is further manifest in terms of distress such as depression anxiety obsessionality absent mindedness and physical symptoms It has much in common with agitated depression and is in many ways similar to bereavement and could be described as a form of post traumatic stress syndrome Originally published in 1989 this title will be of considerable interest to those who have counselling or care giving roles An attentional resource model of homesickness experience is developed and the implications for self help and counselling are considered The book will also be of interest to cognitive psychologists since investigation of the cognitive basis of homesickness provides information into the way in which planning processes operate and in this sense there is a contribution to the understanding of cognitive factors in change and transition
